FLYIN' JENNY

ALTHOUGH NOW CERTAIN THAT CAPTAIN ENDU IS A PHONY··PROBABLY A NAZI SPY··JENNY DOES NOT LOSE HER NERVE···
Released by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.
7-19-43
GORGEOUS NIGHT, CAPTAIN. IS MT. HOLOCAUST FAR FROM HERE?
NO··ER, AS A MATTER OF FACT IT'S VERY NEAR.
SUCH AS WHERE··· IN YOUR IMAGINATION?
EXACTLY!
YOU ARE SURPRISED, MISS DARE·· SHOCKED, PERHAPS?
'NOT REALLY. NOTHING ABOUT THIS WAR SURPRISES ME ANYMORE, BUT I AM CHAGRINED
YOU NEEDN'T BE. CHARMING LOVELY WOMEN IS PART OF MY STOCK IN TRADE
THERE'S AN AMERICAN WORD FOR SUCH CONCEIT·· BALONEY! THE SKY IS MY WEAKNESS·· NOT PHONY OFFICERS OF ANY NATION!
7-20-43
THAT FRAULEIN WAS A NATURAL SLIP I SUPPOSE. YOU ARE GERMAN, AREN'T YOU ··NOT BALKANIAN?
RIGHT· ALLOW ME··MAJOR VON BURPOHEIM··HOMEWARD BOUND!
COME, COME, MISS DARE, WHERE'S YOUR ALLEGED AMERICAN SPORTSMANSHIP?
IT DOESN'T INCLUDE CHEERING AT KIDNAPPING.
7-21-43
YOU TOO ARE IN SECRET SERVICE WORK FOR YOUR COUNTRY ··DO YOU ADVERTISE YOUR PROFESSION?
I DON'T GO AROUND SHOOTING DOWN MY PALS. HOW COULD YOU DO SUCH A THING?
THAT IS JUSTIFIABLE SACRIFICE FOR THE GOOD OF THE STATE.
GOOD OLD MURDERER'S ROW··· THE THIRD REICH ···WHO'S GOING TO ENJOY IT WHEN YOUR YOUNG AND BRAVE ARE DEAD?
THIS PLANE IS FAST···BUT THE BALK HUMMINGBIRDS CAN CATCH US.
THAT HAS BEEN ARRANGED. THERE WILL BE NO PURSUIT
7-22-43
YOU MADE A SINGULAR REMARK TO YOUR FRIEND, MISS WOODS ABOUT MT. HOLOCAUST. DID YOU SUSPECT?
NO. I WAS HONEST···AS I THOUGHT YOU WERE. BUT BABE WILL ASK QUESTIONS!
BACK AT EL FLYOLO.
IS THIS MT HOLOCAUST PRETTY?
MT. HOLOCAUST? THAT IS A MYTH, MY DEAR. SORT OF A FLYER'S SHANGRI LA!
WHEW!
LOOK, DERWALK, THIS CAPTAIN ENDU···IS HE OKAY?
SURELY··BIT OF A ROMANTICIST··WHAT YOU CALL A LADIES' MAN.
7-23-43
OFFICIAL RADIO MESSAGE FOR MISS JENNY DARE, SIR··IT IS CODE··· MARKED URGENT!
YOU TAKE IT CAPTAIN DAVIS.
RICK YOU'RE MY RANKING OFFICER HERE. HAVE I YOUR PERMISSION TO TAKE A GANDER AT THIS THING?
SURE··IF YOU THINK YOU CAN DOPE IT OUT!
IN JENNY'S ABSENCE, BABE ACCEPTS AN IMPORTANT OFFICIAL RADIO MESSAGE FOR HER···
I'M BEGINNIN' TO FEEL LIKE MATA HARI··· WISH I WASN'T SO NERVOUS.
BET I WISH I'D HAD MORE EDUCATION BEFORE I'M THROUGH WITH THIS CIPHER THINGAMAJIG!
7-24-43
AFTER MUCH MENTAL STRUGGLING, BABE DECIPHERS THE MESSAGE···
MY GOSH! JENNY, MY POOR LAMB! WHY, THAT DIRTY·· I'VE GOT TO GET RICK·· AND FAST.

strom, vice president, said, "We are interested in Mansfield, and you can be sure that we will give every consideration to the possibility of serving your community."

J. J. O'Donovan, vice president of the Pennsylvania Central Airlines, replied, "As to our company's policy concerning such service we have gone on record publicly recommending a program of local and feeder service linking many cities not having access to air transportation with mainline terminals.

"We have also proposed 'directional development' by existing airlines, those that are within reasonable distances on either side of present air routes. In other words, we feel it is about time the industry assumed its obligation to the nation's 'Forgotten cities' and that the matter of providing service to Mansfield and similar cities that have clearly shown their need of feeder service is very much our responsibility.

"We shall appreciate being advised as to the progress of work on your airport so that when the time comes, proper consideration, in accordance with the above stated policy, may be given by our company."

DEATH TAKES 2

Daughter Dies 24 Hours After Demise of Her Mother.

Mrs. Olive Grabill Wallace died this morning at her home, 425 West Fourth street, just 24 hours after the death of her mother, Mrs. Agnes Grabill, 88. Mrs. Grabill died Thursday morning at the Wallace home.

Mrs. Wallace, who had been ill for some time, was born and reared in Mansfield. She was a member of the First Lutheran church.

Surviving are her husband, A. N. Wallace; a sister, Mrs. Anna Yingling, and two nieces, Mrs. Helen Fike, and Mrs. William Marquis.

Double funeral services for the mother and daughter will be conducted Monday at 2:30 p. m. at the Jones Memorial with Rev. Grover E. Swoyer in charge. Burial will be in Memorial park.

RUBBER STRIKE IN FOURTH DAY

Production At Standstill In Akron Plant.

AKRON—(INS)— Production was at a standstill today at 1,200 striking employes of the General Tire and Rubber company remained idle for the fourth day, ignoring pleas of union and company officials and Frederick H. Bullen, regional War Labor board disputes director at a meeting yesterday.

Referred to the national WLB Wednesday, the dispute was started when an employe was discharged for not reporting for work when notified after settlement of a strike in one of the departments earlier this week.

TAKEN BY DEATH AT AGE OF 18

ASHLAND—Emma May Austin, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Austin, near Lakefork, died Friday at 5:30 p. m. at Ashland County Children's home.

Miss Austin has lived at the home for six years. Besides the parents she is survived by five brothers and six sisters.

Funeral services will be conducted Monday at 1:30 p. m. at the Gilbert funeral home with Rev. Frank L. Hicks officiating. Burial will be in Lakefork cemetery.

ed as "probably" shot down by the Allied airmen who severely punished Jap defenses in the Bogadjim area.

Five other Zeros were classed as "possibles."

As against this tally of 23 Japanese planes knocked out of combat only two of the bombers' fighter escorts were downed.

Again the enemy staggered under the weight of Allied bombs when medium bombers, with fighter escort, destroyed 12 Japanese barges and destroyed or damaged 13 others in a strong sweep along the coasts of New Guinea and New Britain from Hanisch harbor to Cape Bushing. The barges were blasted in the Huon gulf area.

Although no mention was made of the ground situations in the Salamaua area of New Guinea or around Munda on New Georgia, it was understood that United Nations forces were steadily improving their positions in both areas. Ground troops were aided consistently by air support in both theaters.

BODY CREMATED

KENT —(INS)— Memorial services for Mrs. James O. Engleman, 69, were planned today after her cremation. Wife of the retired president of Kent State university, Mrs. Engelman had been seriously ill for a month.

John Gensel, assistant pastor and a native of Puerto Rico, will act as leader at the meeting of the Luther league at 7 p. m. when the topic will be "Puerto Rico, the Island of Contrasts." Earnest Workers will meet Monday at 2 p. m.

MAIN STREET EVANGELICAL

The annual Sunday school picnic Wednesday at 6 p. m. at South park highlights the church activities next week. At the Sunday service at 10:45 a. m., Rev. C. L. Kern will use as his sermon subject, " God's Stewards." At the 8 p. m. service, Rev. Kern will talk on "Facing the Past, Present and Future." There will be no Sunday evening services during August and the first Sunday in September, the pastor has announced.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN

"It Can't Be Done," will be the subject of Rev. C. A. Portz at the 10:30 a. m. service Sunday. Children of the church program will be in session in the primary department during worship hour.

BRACE BRETHREN

Continuing his series of messages on the theme, "The Church of Jesus Christ," Rev. Henry G. Rempel will speak on the subject, "For What Purpose Was the Church Established?" at the 9:30 a. m. service Sunday. At the 8 p. m. service Rev. Rempel will preach on the subject, "Too Great a Sinner To Be Saved, True or False?" Rev. and Mrs. Rempel, Mrs. Aolph Witzky and Mrs. John Guthrie will attend the East Central District conference in Ashland Tuesday and Wednesday.

FIRST METHODIST

Rev. S. Lee Whiteman will use as his sermon topic, "Is God Forgotten?" at the 10:30 a. m. Sunday service. Junior church has disbanded until Sept. 5. Epworth league will meet Sunday at 6:30 p. m. with Virginia Osbun leading the discussion, "What We Con Do Together." Methodist Men and Women's society is sponsoring a church picnic to be held at South park Thursday at 6:00 p. m.

EAST MANSFIELD PRESBYTERIAN

Rev. A. L. Calvin, pastor of Savannah United Presbyterian church, will be guest speaker at the church Sunday at 7:30 p. m. At the service at 9:30 a. m Rev. Maynard A. Mills will speak on the subject, "Things Unseen." Y. P.C.U., Junior Y.P.C.U., and Junior Missionary meet at 6:30 p. m. Sunday.

Lieutenant Whittaker, who was a co-pilot in Captain Eickenbacher's party, said, "I was an atheist, but from my companions I learned to pray and saw prayer answered. There are no atheists in rubber rafts amid whitecaps and sharks. My entire life has been changed by the events that began October 20, 1942. It is this day I will never forget."

The Church is the house of prayer, the designated place for worship and Christian confession such as Lieutenant Whittaker made. He did it in a rubber raft; you can and ought to do it. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

World Religious News

"In order that military personnel may be free to attend such services as they may desire, commanders will reduce military duty and labor on Sunday to the measure of strict necessity; and any athletic or recreational activities that may be held on Sunday will, if practicable, be so scheduled as not to interfere with attendance on services of worship," announced Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, March 6.

Bibles in several languages are now being printed by the Geneva office of the World Council of Churches, according to the Religious News Service, in order to relieve a grave shortage of Scriptures on the continent of Europe. An increase of 17 per cent in contributions to the work of the World Council over the previous year is noted in the annual report of the Council's Christian Unity fund.

During 1942 $480,000 was remitted to China for famine relief by the American advisory committee, operating through the Church Committee for China Relief that is a participant in contributions made to the Presbyterian Wartime Service commission. This is 42 per cent of the total fund remitted to China, which was $1,141,000. Approximately half of that amount (about 21 per cent) went to "battle zone relief," and an equal sum to orphanages and children's camps.

The Federal Council of the Churches of America states that large numbers of congregations of all denominations in America go through an entire year without a single accession upon profession of faith and that one-half of America is not a member of any church — Jewish, Catholic, or Protestant, and that over 15,000,000 of our school-age children are receiving no religious training.

Dr. Carpenter, who traveled in China recently asserted: "Everywhere in my travels I heard of the splendid work being done for orphaned children. After seeing them in Siaan, my conviction is that aid to orphans is of the greatest importance and must be continued indefinitely.

"This whole program," he continued, "which we support through contributions to the United China Relief society, must be part of the future friendly relationship and mutual aid between the United States of America and the Chinese Republic, looking towards a better world for all of us."

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, JULY 24, 1943.

Drive carefully tomorrow—or possibly you'd better save gasoline by walking to church.

Before you pay twice what a thing's worth think again—maybe you can get along without it.

An Illinois wife suing for divorce contends she can't live on $800 a month—possibly never stopping to think that even some war workers have to struggle along on less.

The 'Trial-and-Error' Formula

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S assurance, in the early days of New Deal experimentation, that "If we find it doesn't work we'll try something else", was no more than an adaptation of the "trial-and-error" principle to the administration of government.

"Trial-and-error", as defined in Webster's International dictionary, is: "A finding out the best way to reach a desired result, a correct solution, or the like, by trying out one or more ways or means and by noting and eliminating errors or causes of failure, sometimes a trying this and that until something succeeds."

Practically all scientific and mechanical progress has come about through trial-and-error experimentation and much of human knowledge is attained in the "school of experience", in which trial-and-error does a large part of the teaching.

It will be observed, however, that "noting and eliminating errors or causes of failure" is necessary to successful operation of the trial-and-error formula—a requirement that has apparently been persistently disregarded by President Roosevelt in his expensive experimentation with domestic problems of the United States.

Instead of eliminating "causes of failure", it has been the policy of the president to retain the real "causes" in positions of high responsibility and to add other potential "causes" from time to time, for experimental purposes.

The present muddled situation in Washington, which has caused so much dissension among jealous bureaucrats, may be explained as a direct result of retaining "causes of failure" instead of eliminating them.

Awaited Chance To Surrender

THE REASON for small losses of American and British troops in Sicilian landings and the subsequent campaign is no mystery. Italian prisoners have explained it plausibly.

Obliged to put up a show of resistance, they say, they did not shoot to kill. They merely shot to make a bluff of performing an unwelcome duty imposed on them by their government, "until they could decently surrender." They say they knew where the landings were to be made, and deliberately let the invaders enter, because "secretly all Italians wanted us to land and save them from this abominable war."

There were exceptions, no doubt, but on the whole such statements seem to bear the brand of truth. The Italian people regard themselves as friends of the British and American people and want nothing to interfere with their friendship.

Bernard Shaw Has Another Idea

BERNARD SHAW thinks one war isn't enough. Not content with helping his country to fight the Axis, he wants also to fight the established system of spelling. Writing to the London Times, he advocates the use of "fone" for "phone," and the adoption of a 42-letter alphabet which would make it possible to spell "though" in two letters. This would, in his opinion, save enough paper, machinery and labor to "pay for half-a-dozen wars if we could find nothing better to spend it on."

Simplified spelling is one presumably good cause which has been given little encouragement. "Programme" has become "program," and "theatre" is more often written "theater"—which just about completes the changes that have reached general adoption.

Once the movement had an advocate who was in a position to do something about it. President Theodore Roosevelt in 1906 ordered the public printer to adopt the reform method of spelling some 300 words, most of them involving no greater change than "judgment" for "judgement." Congress declared that this was beyond his powers, and almost unanimously ordered government spelling to stay as it was.

Lock Up Your Lawn Mower

YESTERDAY'S paper carried a small item about a lawn mower being stolen from the garage of a West Fifth street home.

Theft of a lawn mower nowadays should be taken more seriously than might ordinarily be the case as it is practically impossible to buy either a new or a good used mower at this time.

Recommendation is that the family lawn mower be kept in a carefully locked place as some people's idea of "personal liberty" carries to the point of stealing anything they can get their hands on.

Wartime Boom for Railroads

RAILROADS seem to be having a breathing spell. For several years before the war, it began to look as if trucks were going to put freight trains out of business, but some interesting figures are now presented by Joseph Kerr, chairman of the Southern Trade association.

Speaking before the emergency board of the National Railway Panel, Mr. Kerr said that from 1921 to 1942 rail deliveries of livestock fell 57 per cent, while those by truck rose 900 per cent. In the same period the number of trucks increased from 1,000,000 to 6,000,000. Now anyone living or passing near a railroad can see how freight traffic has grown.

It is hard to imagine any business more closely tied up with national prosperity than the railroads. After the war there will probably be plenty of business for all.

It's time for Hollywood to take some drastic action against those young girls who contribute to the delinquency of middle-aged movie stars.

Robert Quillen suggests: "Until we can match the political shrewdness of the British, maybe we'd better not tell them how to manage India."

Housewife unable to secure help in her home suggests that the old maxim be revised to read: "Cleanliness is next to impossible."

GHOSTS OVER ITALY

Ask That Rome Be Designated as 'Open City' to Assure Protection

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

THE BOMBING of Rome has created a worldwide tension which is becoming increasingly taut because of voluntary repression of public discussion, due to a tacit recognition all around that it's a subject which is full of dynamite.

While there's a strong disinclination to debate the air raid which already has taken place, a very general hope is being recorded that circumstances will render further bombing unnecessary. From many countries is coming the renewed appeal that Mussolini remove all military objectives from Rome and declare it an "open city" which, under international law, would put it outside the war zone.

This is a move which has been urged on the Fascist chief ever since Italy entered the war, but he never has given any indication that he intended to comply. Obviously his reasons are that Rome has provided him not only with an essential military base but a place of security for his headquarters. His reluctance can be understood when one is given the definition of "open city."

In checking on this matter I turned to authorities in both Washington and London. My understanding is that an "open city" is one from which have been removed all troops, defenses, military installations (including headquarters and headquarters staff), military production (which means any kind of war factory), and transportation facilities which are used for the movement of military supplies or personnel.

When all this has been done, the power in possession then declares the city "open."

Since Mussolini not only is head of the government, but commander in chief of the army and navy, he obviously would be barred from Rome.

FROM an authoritative source in London I further understand that the procedure of creating the "open city" would be initiated by Italy through a third party, asking for Allied conditions. Moreover, the Allies wouldn't rely on the enemy's word that all conditions had been fulfilled, but would take such steps as are necessary to see that they had been carried out.

Just how the Allies would satisfy themselves on this point isn't stated. That would be laid down if and when their conditions were asked for by Mussolini.

They either would have to rely on a third party, or send their own representatives to investigate. It naturally would be sufficient if the Vatican, for instance, should find it possible to give assurances that conditions had been carried out.

Obviously it would be a heavy blow to Il Duce to lose Rome not only as a military base but as a bomb-proof shelter for himself and government. But the thing cuts a lot deeper than that.

Rome is the heart of Italy's railroads. Most of the country's war industries are in the north, and in order to get munitions from the supply centers to southern Italy—to Sicily, for example—they are poured through Rome.

True, there is a railway which runs along the eastern coast, close to the Adriatic, but that is a round-about way for the movement of military traffic.

THUS FAR Mussolini has given no sign that he intends to relinquish his sanctuary. Still, circumstances have put him in a position where he certainly must consider making Rome an "open city." In this connection the London Daily Mail reports from Madrid that Hitler is said to be urging the duce to transfer the government and military staffs to Verona.

Undoubtedly he also is in the uncomfortable spot of having to debate whether after all he hadn't better sue for peace forthwith, since it's obvious that he will be knocked out soon, anyway. The Americans' capture of Palermo, political and cultural center of Sicily, certainly is a harsh reminder of the approaching end.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Tuesday, July 24, 1923.

Five thousand "plans to end war" had been submitted in Edward W. Bok's $100,000 contest—100,000 plans were expected.

Home grown sweet corn made its first appearance on market, priced at 60 cents a dozen.

Floyd Dent, Boy Scout executive, spoke on youth problems at meeting of Rotary club.

Zeig company's warehouse in Fredericktown was destroyed by fire started by lightning.

Rooms in Y.M.C.A. dormitory were being repaired and redecorated.

Son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schoenman, 657 West Third street.

Eel measuring 27 inches in length was caught by Jacob Schuster, in Owl creek, near Howard (as he will probably recall).

Shoe repair men were complaining that business was "falling off."

TODAY IN HISTORY

The first Chinese-Japanese war in modern times broke out on this date in 1894. Exactly 35 years later, the Kellogg-Briand treaty, whereby 62 powers renounced war, was proclaimed.

Daily Bible Thought

They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint.—Isaiah 40:31.

Dave Boone Says:

IT WOULD be nice if Harold Ickes and Curtiss Brown could get together on the truth about the gasoline situation instead of keeping the public all balled up as usual. You can't get any more befuddled listening to the views of two private citizens who don't have any access to the facts than you can listening to these two government officials.

Harold and Prentiss are so far apart that Mr. Byrnes is going to take hold now and make a noble effort to get the facts and set the public straight. But he's under one terrific handicap. He's in Washington where all the data is.

As a result of Mr. Brown's recent prophecy of easier gas regulations, millions of Americans are running around saying, "Oh, we're going to be able to drive more in a few days." And as a result of Harold's contradictions millions more are saying, "There's no chance of getting any more gasoline. Let's fight our way into that overcrowded bus that will be along a half hour late pretty soon."

* * *

It ain't being compelled to walk that bothers most of us. And it ain't being made to find substitute means of travel. It's being left in midair by the contradictory Washington statements that makes us peeved and weary.

Timely Editorial

So You "Can't Get Away."

Strange how we cling to the idea of indispensability—our own indispensability for example.

"I can't possibly get away now," cries the so-called great executive. "Oh, I couldn't possibly get away even for half a day now."

I wonder if it ever occurs to these "top guys" that they may not get up at all tomorrow morning and that their beloved businesses will go right on. Three days and they will be buried with a lot of whoop-la and then probably the business will go on better than ever. — Grove Patterson in the Toledo Blade.

Rumbling of Politics Over U. S. Finds Interest Centered In War

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE SOUND and the fury departed from Washington, on the unexpected note of President Roosevelt "disciplining" Vice President Henry Wallace harder than Commerce Secretary Jesse Jones after their Board of Economic Warfare quarrel.

Not so throughout the nation. There, amid the murmur of congressmen explaining past deeds to the home folks, new political rumblings arose.

The national election of 1944 became the theme.

In Manhattan, the eastern conference of the Republican postwar policy association gathered and agreed that international cooperation suited them. Keynoted National Chairman Deneen A. Watson, a midwestern lawyer: "The way to beat Mr. Roosevelt . . . is to take the foreign issue away from him."

Chairman Watson was authorized to advise Harrison E. Spangler, chairman of the national Republican committee, that a stand should be taken on America's role in the postwar world.

Victory Predicted.

Earlier in the week, Republican Senator Nye had mentioned Brig. Gen. Hanford MacNider as a new "ideal candidate."

While the last word obviously remained to be said on GOP programs and candidates, Mr. Spangler in Washington made other headlines. Flatly he forecast a Republican victory in '44.

Private polls, he announced in a seven page statement, showed that the party had gained three per cent among the ranks of labor and five per cent in rural areas of the north. Among small businessmen, he said, it had also gained five per cent.

Meanwhile, in Democratic circles eyes were also fixed on '44. President Roosevelt's elimination of the BEW, headed by Vice President Wallace, brought open satisfaction to conservatives. They took it as a sign the president was strengthening himself politically by a gesture toward New Deal foes, predicted that Wallace would be replaced by a running mate more popular with the south.

Democratic New Dealers expressed resentment. From New Deal Senator Guffey came the assertion that "opposition-to-Roosevelt" Democratic leaders plotted to boom Virginia's Senator Byrd for president, James A. Farley for vice president.

iting dignitaries at Phoenixville, Pa., beamed for photographers.

Finished to its eastern terminal was the 1,251-mile pipeline called "Big Inch," constructed at a cost of $95,000,000 to bring oil from Texas to the eastern seaboard. Beneath midwestern fields and across the Alleghanies, crude oil was already pouring eastward as fast as a man can walk, at the rate of 100,000 barrels a day.

Construction of Big Inch began Aug. 3, 1942, in the Southwest. In its eastward progress the gigantic pipeline crossed thirty rivers and about 200 streams. Into its building went 360,000 tons of seamless steel.

Newcomer to OPA.

Connecticut advertising man Chester A. Bowles, a nephew of the noted newspaperman Samuel Bowles, is a passionate devotee of sailing. Last week he was cruising off Marthas Vineyard in his sloop without gasoline or radio. Coastguardsmen were on his trail.

Belatedly he docked at Hyannis, Mass., read that OPA Director Prentiss Brown wanted him to become general manager of the Office of Price Administration. During the week he arrived in Washington to take over his new job, which Detroit adman Lou Maxon had sought to win, before he quit with denunciations of OPA personnel.

Bowles, 42, is a businessman with the full support of labor, friends say.

At Home

'Big Inch' Comes Through.

Welder Ray Gunn stood up, shoved back his mask, muttered "Well, baby, you're finished." Visfall was delayed by last-ditch suicide resistance.

Meanwhile, Australians continued their advances in New Guinea, stormed Jap-held Mount Tambu, seven miles south of Salamaua.

AMGOT Takes Over.

After the first World war Allied troops occupied the Rhineland, but British, French and American zones of authority were sharply defined.

As Allied forces captured new areas of Sicily, however, a new streamlined organization, not based on national lines, swiftly took over control. The new type of government which is fascism's successor and may soon rule much of Europe is AMGOT—Allied Military Government of Occupied Territory.

British and American flags hang side by side in all AMGOT offices. Conquered peoples are ruled, as far as possible, through their own local officials, but no turncoat Fascists are allowed. Religious customs are respected, local affairs administered on a scientific basis, the people prepared for AMGOT's successor—a post-war, free government of their own.

Red Counteroffensive.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler threw his first line divisions at the Russian-held Kursk salient in the central Russian front and they bounced back at him.

Just above Kursk, the Orel bulge points dangerously toward Moscow, only 150 miles northwest. Nazi strategy obviously was predicated on first straightening the lines before Kursk and then swinging around to take Moscow from the southeast.

When the German offensive petered out in less than two weeks, Stalin hurled a triple-headed blow at Orel. Simultaneous advances top and bottom and on the eastern edge of the salient cut deep holes in the line, cut equally deep holes in German troops, tanks and planes.

The Russian campaign, hailed in the early days of battle as a strong counterattack, soon revealed itself as an offensive on the entire front. Orel looked like another Stalingrad.

Abroad

Progress In Sicily.

A quick end to the Sicilian campaign was foreseen as the Allied invaders continued to hurl back disorganized, poorly-equipped Italians who were surrendering by the thousands.

Cases became more numerous, as the third invasion week commenced, of Italian army units killing their German officers, mutinying against leaders of their own nationality who attempted to rally them.

It was noted that far from being a lion equipped with fangs, the Italian soldier was a shabby victim of inefficient leadership and political graft. Tanks were poor, many of old French manufacture; artillery was ineffective, planes outdated. Some Italian ration boxes were found to be filled with gravel covered by a thin layer of food.

Sicilian civilians amiably accepted the conquerors of their land. Eagerly they queued up for food, watched with passive indifference Italian prisoners being herded to the coasts.

Rome Bombed.

Another Axis delusion exploded when U. S. airmen attacked military targets in long-immune Rome.

There, in fascism's capital, Mussolini had been concentrating his military establishment. Through the great marshalling yards of San Lorenzo and Littorio seven rail lines carried practically all supplies for southern Italy. Factories and airfields formed a martial ring around the Eternal City; high-powered generating plants had been built so close to religious shrines that worshippers vibrated at their devotions.

The Axis believed that Rome would never be bombed, due to the presence of Vatican City.

U. S. Raids Kuriles.

American bombs fell for the first time on Paramushiro, mystery base of the Japanese which lies 1,200 miles north of Tokyo. Heavy Liberators took off from airfields in the western Aleutians, flew 861 miles across the north Pacific to strike at the Kurile outpost of Japan.

Over Paramushiro the usually foggy weather cleared so the airmen were able to deliver a careful and effective daylight attack. Installations were blown up, ships in the harbor bombarded.

Meanwhile Kiska, farthest East Japanese outpost, was bombed and shelled in recurrent attacks.

Munda, Salamaua.

Hand-to-hand jungle fighting cost the Japanese more than 260 dead as Allied forces pressed on toward Munda. A bitter clash took place on New Georgia island when Yanks broadened their Lilio beachhead.

ERNIE PYLE Roving Reporter

Ernie Gets Acquainted With Sailors And Finds They're a Fine Bunch of Fellows.

ABOARD A U. S. NAVY SHIP OF THE INVASION FLEET—(Delayed)—In the week that we were aboard ship before we set out on the invasion I naturally was not permitted to send any columns so I spent the days reading and gabbing with the sailors.

Every now and then I would run in to take a shower bath like a child playing with a new toy.

I got to know a great many of the sailors personally and almost all of them by nodding acquaintance. I found them to be just people and nice people like the soldiers. They are fundamentally friendly. They all want to get home. They are willing to do everything they can to win the war. They all would kind of like to have their names in the paper and deep down they're all a little afraid.

There is one rather subtle difference between sailors and soldiers I did sense although many of the sailors will probably resent it and that is—the sailors aren't hardened and roughened as much as the soldiers. It's understandable.

The frontline soldier has lived like an animal for months and is a veteran of the cruel fierce world of death. Everything has been abnormal and unstable in his life for months. He has been filthy dirty, has eaten if and when, has slept on the hard ground without cover.

His clothes have been greasy, he has lived in a constant haze of dust, pestered by flies and the heat, moving constantly, deprived of all the things that once meant stability. Things such as walls, chairs, floors, windows, faucets, shelves, soft drinks and the greatly important little matter of knowing that you'll go to bed tonight in the same place you got up this morning.

The frontline soldier has had to harden his inside as well as his outside or he would crack under the strain. Sailors aren't sissies—either by tradition or currently—but they aren't as rough and tough as the Tunisian soldiers, at least the gang I was with.

A ship is a home and the security of home has kept them more as they were. They don't cuss as much nor as foully as soldiers. They don't bust loose as riotously when they hit town. They aren't as all-around hard in outlook. They've not drifted as far from normal life as soldiers—for they have world news every morning in mimeographed sheets, have radios, movies nearly every night, ice cream. Their clothes, their beds are clean. They walk through the same doors, up the same steps every day for months. They sleep every night in the same beds.

Of course, when they die, death for them is just as horrible—and sometimes they die in greater masses than soldiers. But until the enemy comes over the horizon a sailor doesn't have to fight. A frontline soldier has to fight everything all the time. It makes a difference in a man's character.

ALONG this line, a very subtle and I'm sure very temporary change came over the soldiers who came aboard for the invasion. They were no longer the rough and tumble warriors I knew on the battlefield. They were quiet, almost meek, aboard ship. From all I can figure they were awed by their little sojourn back into the American way.

There was no quarreling aboard between soldiers and sailors as you might expect. Not even any ridicule or words of traditional contempt for each other. One night I was talking with a bunch of sailors on the fantail and they spoke thoughts you could never imagine coming from sailors' mouths.

One of them said, "Believe me, after seeing these soldiers aboard, my hat's off to the army. They really take it and they don't complain about anything. Why it's pitiful to see how grateful they are just to have a hard deck to sleep on."

And another one said, "Any little thing we do for them they appreciate. We've got more than they have and, boy, I'd go three miles out of my way to share something with a soldier."

A third said, "Yes, they live like dogs and they're the ones that have to take those beaches, too. A few of us will get killed but a hell of a lot of them will."

And a fourth said, "Since hearing some of their stories, I've been down on my knees every night thanking God I was smart enough to enlist in the navy. And they're so decent about everything. They don't even seem to resent all the things we have that they don't."

The sailors were dead serious. It almost brought a lump to your throat to hear them talk.

You folks back home know how I feel about infantry. I'm a rabid one-man movement bent on tracking down and stamping out everybody in the world who doesn't fully appreciate the common frontline soldier. Now that even the sailors are on my side you'd better watch out.

CHAPTER VIII

You are only a woman, Clare, Meegan thought. You are only a woman who says the things that all of us say, who says the same things that a plain woman would say. It isn't then what you say that makes people do what you want. What is it then? Why do you make me feel gauche and awkward? Perhaps beautiful women know that their beauty is all they have and that they must not remove the cover to let anyone see inside them . . . Perhaps their beauty is their only secret, their only weapon . . . I don't want Toby hurt. You hurt the people you know, Clare . . .

She said, "I know it would be a lot more interesting if you told us what you've been doing . . ."

"But I've been doing nothing, absolutely nothing," Clare said.

Meegan's eyes quickened. She thought that Clare was joking when she said she had done nothing or perhaps, on second thought, that she was being modest. But Clare was serious . . . She had had five years of marriage and travel and wealth, she had seen all the beautiful places in the world and she had been a woman loved . . . and yet in all seriousness she said that she had done nothing . . . Meegan's sensitive mouth quivered slightly. She could think of nothing to say in response. Glancing quickly at Clare, she saw that Clare was looking for Toby probably, her fingers playing with her wide silk handkerchief Clare was nervous. That unhealthy something under her skin was playing on her nevres . . .

Clare turned to her and it was obvious that she was only making conversation when she said, "The island is still beautiful and we're simply delighted with the house. You must meet our guests. Some amusing people from Washington. But Washington is so amusing these days . . . Ah, here's Toby with your drink . . . More people are arriving . . . Darling, will you find Fayne and tell him I want him? . . . Toby, please, help me out."

Then Clare and Toby were walking over the lawn toward an older man and woman and Meegan was standing with a cocktail in her hand, conscious that once again Clare had given her an order.

Going toward Fayne she felt again what he had made her feel the first time she had seen him . . . the electrifying sensation of being exquisitely alive, more alive than she had ever been. She stood rather close to him for a few minutes before he took his binoculars away from his face and then laughed and said, "Well! I didn't know I had company!"

"I hate to spoil it by intruding."

"You're not intruding at all." He had her habit of frowning and smiling at the some time. "Am I supposed to know you? Forgive me, but it seems that not a few people who were at my wedding appear hurt when I fail to call them by their first names. I may as well be honest. I don't know yours."

"Of course you don't remember. I'm Meegan McLean. I was there, too, at your wedding."

He smiled. "Then we have met." Then he seemed to be studying her. "So you're one of Clare's childhood friends, too?"

They both laughed at once, their laughter mingling. It would be easy to laugh with him, she thought. You could laugh about a lot of things with him.

She said, "I was the youngest, a serious handicap at the time."

He frowned again. "I know you now. You're . . . you're Toby's sister. I know Toby."

He did not say how or when he knew Toby and she had the uneasy feeling that being Toby's sister placed her in rather a poor light with Fayne.

"Yes, I'm Toby's sister Clare asked me to tell you that more guests are arriving."

"Then I must be getting back." As they began to walk together he said, "I'm not a very good host, am I? But I remember very little of this place from my first visit and it's an old habit of mine to pick up these old binoculars and have a look at new places. The island is lovely, but I don't want to compare it with any other place. It doesn't remind me of any other place It's as characteristically Maryland as your soft shell crabs. I'm sorry I'm not going to be able to spend more time here."

"Someone told me you are in Washington . . . in the service."

He turned his head and smiled a slow smile. "Not enough 'In.' But I'm working on that."

Meegan said, "This is one more time in my life when I wish I were a boy . . ."

"Don't say that. That's sacrilege."

Once more they laughed together. Then he said, "There's nothing glorious about war. It's a dirty business that has to be cleaned up."

They were walking up the stone path when the door opened and a woman stepped onto the porch. A woman perhaps in her middle fifties with faded hair and a patient, long-suffering face. While Meegan reminded herself that Clare's aunt was dead and that this woman was obviously a member of the household, she saw the woman and Fayne exchange glances. Though they said nothing, it was as though the woman asked, 'How is it?' and Fayne had responded with, 'Everything is all right. Don't worry'.

When the woman turned and went into the house again, Fayne said, "That is Miss Willoughby, Clare's secretary." But he said it reluctantly and almost with a suggestion of shame as though he were apologizing for Clare's having a secretary.

But they were walking on toward the rear garden where Clare and Toby were still talking to the older man and woman, Meegan was introduced to them and Fayne shook hands with the man and said some pleasantry to the woman. And while the older man was saying that he had known the island many years ago, Meegan was aware that Fayne was looking at Clare sharply . . . Squinting as she always did in a bright light, she tried to analyze Fayne's sharp look, concluding at last that it had nothing to do with jealousy or suspicion, that it was a look concentrated upon Clare alone as though he was not certain as to what she would do or say next. Had it anything to do with his silent assurance to the faded Miss Willoughby? What was this? What manner of household was this? It was terribly confusing and she had been like a see-saw all day, she thought. Up and down had gone her sensations. Up and down until her brain ached from thinking and her body hurt from feeling.

Presently she saw the tall figure of Adele striding across the lawn to her car. Making an excuse that no one heard, she left them quietly and went to Adele who was in her car now with the motor going.

Adele looked at her angrily, her broad nostrils dilating.

"She hasn't changed a bit," she said. "Not a bit. So it's Toby now . . . How long has that been going on? Don't tell me they haven't seen each other in years. . . . She hasn't changed a bit. She's still rotten inside. I should have known it . . ."

Meegan shook her head slowly and lowered it. She was so ashamed for Toby. Looking up, she asked, "Have Van and Sue gone?"

"Van was tight. Sue drove him home. But he wasn't so tight he didn't remember how wonderful Clare was before he married Sue. He was raving about her . . . I'm getting out of this stinking place. I'll call you."

Meegan was standing where Adele's car had stood a moment before when Toby joined her.

"Want to go dancing at the club tonight, Meegan? They're getting up a party."

"No, Toby. I don't want to go."

"Sure you do. You mean you . . . you haven't anything to wear?"

"It isn't that. I can always find something to wear."

"It's settled then. Don't be obstinate."

"I'm not being obstinate, but I'm not going if I don't want to go and I don't want to go."

"But I told them we'd go. Listen, you don't have to go any other night, you don't have to do anything I ask you to do . . . but this one time. You can't be openly hostile. It isn't sensible. I told them we'd go and they don't want an uneven number. You can't back out now. It's too late."

It was hopeless. She said, "All right. I'll go this time but don't ever make my plans for me again."

He smiled at her. "Don't take it so hard Why should you care what I do?"

"Because we have the same mother and because the three of us make our family now."

"Okay. I'm sorry. Now suppose you take the car and go home and get dressed and tell Mother we'll be late. I'll meet you at the club at seven-thirty for dinner. I won't change. I'm going in for a swim here." When he dropped the keys in her hand he said, "Thanks, Meegan," and abruptly walked away.

Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

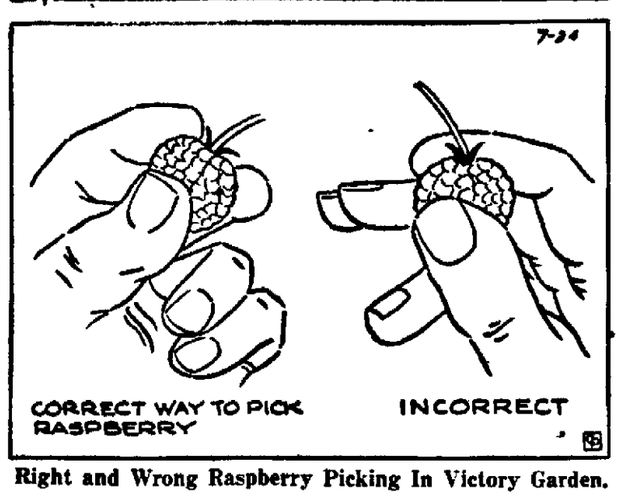
For a cooling treat on a warm day the first of these children's books to be released Saturday is recommended. The other tells of a boy's experiences earning his way through agricultural college.

SKI PATROL, by Montgomery Atwater—An author who has given us other stories of outdoor life in the mountains of the West tells now of a skiing trip in search of a trapping thief. Brad Davis was a ski champion at school but was excused to join his uncles on the winter game patrol in a national park. When the poacher set fire to the cabin Brad's uncles were using they were injured; so Brad had to search alone for the thief who formerly had killed his father.

ABNER JARVIS, by W. T. Person—Abner was working his way through college His father had advised him to learn all he could besides what the books would teach him as long as he could make satisfactory grades It was an agricultural school in the southern mountains and amusements were simple, but even so Abner seldom had the right clothes. He believed that those who jeered him for that were really not as good as he.

The German national debt was increasing at the rate of four billion marks a month in 1942.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Right and Wrong Raspberry Picking In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

IF you are fortunate enough to have red raspberries in your Victory garden, or if some neighbor has given you the privilege of picking in his or her berry patch, learn the right and wrong way of picking these delectable berries.

Simple as it may seem, there is a right and a wrong way to pick raspberries and correct picking has much to do with the berries holding their flavor and firmness. Right and wrong raspberry picking is illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph.

The correct way to pick a raspberry is to grasp the berry light between thumb and two fingers, as illustrated, and pull from the "core" with steady, even pressure. It is incorrect and results in bruised berries to use just thumb and one finger, as illustrated.

Remember that raspberries picked early in the day remain cooler and keep longer than those picked later. As the heat of the day increases berries become softer and the skin is more easily punctured.

Rhizopus rot, the principal cause of "whiskers" on raspberries, does not readily penetrate unbroken skin but easily infects fruit with broken outer covering.

Allow raspberries wet with rain, dew or fog to dry on the bush before picking.

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

Slow Driving Necessitates Special Attention to Motor Lubrication

Weekley Garage Finishes Survey on Cause of Crank Case Sludge.

Essential driving is the only kind patriotic Americans are doing these days. So that the cars that are on the road deserve the best of care. In fact, intelligent driving and methodical care are being highlighted in automobile news as necessary to the preservation of your car.

The Ross Weekley Garage, 46 West Temple Court, is dedicated to the task of making your car last longer by the simple formula of giving it expert service. Beside the proprietor, Ross Weekley, a brother, Arnold Weekley and William Kern are the men in uniform on the Home Front who have enlisted in the all-out effort to prevent present or future car trouble that can be avoided by intelligent care.

Not only do you get expert lubrication, laundry and simonizing service at Weekley's, but courteous mechanics are instructed to pass along any tested information that will help to keep your car on the road longer.

The mechanics at Weekley's, for instance, made a recent survey, collecting authentic information from reliable sources on the causes of large amounts of sludge in crank cases that they find to be a general condition in recent months.

They find that vaporization occurs, because with slow driving, motors are not heated up enough to evaporate the condensation in the crank case, and a molasses-like substance, sludge, is formed.

This sludge necessitates more frequent changes of oil than were ever necessary when cars were being driven at more rapid speeds, Weekley states. Continuing, he suggests that car owners follow the advice of major oil companies which recommend that oil be changed every 60 days or every 700 to 750 miles, whichever occurs first, if motors are to avoid damage and costly, perhaps delayed, repair.

The central location of the Ross Weekley garage is an important consideration in these hurried times. Located just a step from Fourth street on Temple Court, cars may conveniently be left before work in the morning and called for on the way home in the late afternoon. Meanwhile they will be serviced and safely parked in a cool, connecting garage. Or if preferred, Weekley's will call for and deliver the car . . . giving it expert care meanwhile.

The Ross Weekley Garage specializes in high grade oils and greases such as Pennzoil and Quaker State. Attendants give careful attention to detail, thus building up for their lubrication service an enviable reputation.

"In fact," Weekley states, "the importance of this 'extra' care for your car cannot be overemphasized if motorists are to continue to drive from here to Victory."

Simonizing and thorough polishing is another special Weekley service. This includes a systematic cleaning of the car both inside and out. This goes far toward preserving the finish and preventing deterioration.

Drive in to Weekley's any time between 7:30 a. m. and 5:30 p. m. for a check up or an estimate on any one of their services. They're in business to cooperate with you in keeping your car on the road.

Ross Weekley is shown, left above, with his employes, Arnold Weekley, a brother, and William Kern, in the Ross Weekley Auto Laundry and Lubricating Station, 46 West Temple Court.

CLOSER TOUCH WITH SERVICE MEN URGED

Swank and Watson Stocks Large Selection of Service Cards.

The Hallmark greeting card slogan, "Keep 'Em Happy With Mail," comes into its own with unprecedented fervor now that friends and families are scattered and men in khaki and navy blue wait for mail call in every corner of the world.

In fact, the importance of the bond between home and war fronts cannot be overemphasized if we are to maintain the morale among men in the Services that will lead to an earlier Victory. This bond can be held and strengthened through constant touch by mail.

Realizing this, Mrs. Gordon Watson of Swank and Watson, 89 North Main, has not only instigated a unique setup wherein she personally corresponds with some 200 service men each month, but constantly urges her customers to "Keep 'Em Happy With Mail," too.

With this idea in mind, she has assembled a large selection of comic, sentimental and congratulatory cards of all types suitable for sending to Service men, this in addition to the regular line of Hallmark cards which has been shown previously at the store.

Also stocked at Swank and Watson's is an interesting selection of portfolios and stationery with Service insignia, as well as a complete line of "parting" gifts such as gentlemen's rings, duffle bags, address books, leather cigaret cases that hold a full pack, playing cards, or the popular bookshef of games including checkers, chess, backgammon, cribbage or poker chips. Or, as a final thought, a box of 50 personalized match packs with name or initials.

BRIDE-ELECT FETED AT PRE-NUPTIAL PARTY

Miss Thora Ruckman, Bride-Elect of Carl W. Laubscher, Jr., Honored By Aunts In Plymouth; Wedding to Take Place Aug. 15.

A LOVELY SHOWER at the home of Mrs. Harold Ruckman, in Plymouth, was given Friday night, in a series of pre-nuptial parties honoring Miss Thora Ruckman, bride-elect of Carl W. Laubscher, jr. Associate hostess at the party was Mrs. Luther Fetters. Mrs. Fetters and Mrs. Ruckman are both aunts of Miss Ruckman.

Bridge and pinochle were in session during the evening. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Charles Hockenberry, Mrs. Carl Laubscher, sr., and Mrs. Donald Fetters, for high scores. Prizes in other games played were kitchen utensils, and were presented, along with the high score prizes, to the bride-elect.

Luncheon was served at small tables centered with garden flowers.

Miss Ruckman received many gifts, among them a quilt from her grandmother, Mrs. Fay Ruckman, and a set of crystal from the hostesses.

Miss Ruckman will become the bride of Mr. Laubscher in an open church ceremony Sunday, Aug. 15, at the St. John's Evangelical and Reformed church.

Members Plan Garden Display For Picnic Meet

The home of Mrs. W. H. Walter, Brinkerhoff avenue, was the scene of the meeting of the Mansfield Garden club Friday morning. Associate hostesses were Mrs. Carvil Gorman and Mrs. G. C. Smith. Luncheon was served buffet style at the noon hour. Water lilies and ivy were used in a pretty arrangement to decorate the table.

Mrs. Alfred Reynolds presented the program, talking on "Permanent Victory Planting." Plans were made for a picnic to be held Aug. 13 at the cabin of Mrs. Louis Olson. Associate hostesses will be Mrs. Gerald Moore, Mrs. Fred Herring and Mrs. William Bowers. Each member is to bring a vegetable, flower or fruit from her garden, or an arrangement of one or several to be on display at the meeting. The session is to convene at 11 a. m.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, July 25.

Sunday's horoscope emphasizes the social, cultural, artistic, and affectional relationships, with much activity in celebrations, visiting, parties and all pleasant avocations of the young and sentimental. Professions and necessary business transactions should enjoy growth and expansion, with pleasant and profitable contacts, especially with influential and friendly persons. But maintain calm, control, and shun impetuous or aggressive moves.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a successful and pleasant year with much activity—professional, literary, artistic and business as well. These should bring enhanced popularity and prestige. Affectional ties and festivities may be paramount, perhaps in celebration of engagements or marriages. In all maintain poise, self-control and harmony, lest impetuousity and hasty words or acts cause unhappiness.

A child born on this day may be active, have many social graces and intellectual talents, promising prestige and popularity, if it will control its impulses and unkind speech, with proper regard for others.

For Monday, July 26.

Monday's astrological forecast is for a day of singular, strange, unique and quite unpredictable experiences, in which the vague, subtle and obscure may be conditions to be reckoned with. But exercise prudence, skill and discernment. With these, high hopes and ideals may materialize. Domestic, financial, social, affectional and spiritual aspirations should flourish, under peculiar auspices.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of peculiar, strange, or mystifying experiences, calling for prudent and discriminating conduct. In home, business, and especially in emotional and spiritual matters there may be subtle or mysterious conditions, but withal happy and gratifying. Work in finely creative artistic channels for exceptional growth or inspired expression. Popularity, honors, profitable connections may result from fidelity to high aspirations and ideals.

A child born on this day may have great creative ability, appreciation and honors, with good luck as well.

Mrs. J. B. Conard Gives Paper at Luncheon Meet

Mrs. J. B. Conard presented a paper entitled "Herbs," at a luncheon meeting for the Cottage Garden club, held yesterday at the home of Mrs. J. H. Petree, 555 Yale drive. Associate hostess at the meeting was Mrs. H. G. Miller.

In her talk, Mrs. Conard told that the usefulness of herbs have been traced from 1500 B. C. to the present time. She told of the different types of herbs and gave their uses. At the close of her talk, she distributed booklets entitled "Herbs and their place in the Wartime Garden."

A short business meeting was held during which the various committee chairmen gave their reports.

Luncheon was served from a refreshment table centered with a bouquet of sweet peas and baby's breath. Mrs. F. F. Forshu and Mrs. Conard poured. Mrs. Petree's home was decorated with garden flowers.

Mrs. O. F. Shively and Mrs. A. C. Tuttle will entertain at the August 13 meeting, with a picnic. Details of that meeting have not been completed, and will be announced at a later date.

Honor Teacher With Party at Hines Home

MRS. IRENE HINES

Twenty-five members of the daughters of Ruth class of the St. Luke's Lutheran church honored their teacher of 16 years, Mrs. Irene Hines, with a birthday party at her home last evening. A picnic supper was enjoyed after-which contests originated by Mrs. Hines were the diversion. The group presented her with a gift. The table was centered with a birthday cake and at each place was a dainty nosegay in the pastel shades.

Mrs. Hines, who has been a resident of Mansfield her entire life, lives at 169 Sturges avenue. She celebrated her 86th birthday yesterday. A member of the Mother's Home Circle for the past 57 years, she was elected life president of the organization in 1935. She has served the group as their head for 24 years.

Moose Committee Has Regular Meet

The membership committee, Women of the Moose, met at the home of Mrs. Gladys Stone, 113½ South Main street. Mrs. Clyde Jenkins was assisting hostess.

Ten members and one guest, Mrs. Ralph Jesson, were present for a business meeting conducted by Mrs. Jenkins. Mrs. W. E. McFarland was elected secretary and reporter at the meeting. Mrs. Fred Roth was named treasurer.

The next meeting will be held at the cottage of Mrs. Ed Wyllie, at Mifflin lake, Aug. 9.

Mrs. Stone served a two course luncheon at small tables decorated in green and yellow.

Picnic Held At South Park By Junior Club

Mrs. Leona Locke, advisor, Mrs. Helen Edmonstone and Mrs. S. Jane Neff, assistant advisors of the Sarah E. Lewis, Jr., club, were in charge of the group and supervised the games and contests at a picnic held Friday afternoon at South park.

The membership contest was won by Jean Auflick; ball throwing contest was won by Patricia Edmonstone; prize for clothespin game awarded to Marion Mitchell; prize in search for most bottle tops was won by Naomi Wagner; prize won by Jo-Ann Mitchell was for landing the most rings in a circle. Roberta Lozier and Joan Auflick received the guest prize. Gifts for the prizes were presented by Mrs. Helen Edmonstone and Mrs. Bess Buchanan presented the membership award.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held Friday, Aug. 13, at 2 o'clock, in the Memorial hall. Arrangements will be made for another outing, at that time.

Patricia Stuhldreher Honored With Shower

MISS PATRICIA STUHLDREHER, the bride-elect of Pvt. Albert J. Baki, was honored last evening at the first in a series of pre-nuptial parties, at the home of Miss Gerry Fisher, West Third street. Miss Fisher was assisted at the linen shower by Mrs. Tom Brooks and Mrs. John Rabal.

Bridge was in session during the evening with prizes being won by Mrs. George Stuhldreher and Miss Dorothy McDevott.

Luncheon was served buffet style from a long table appointed in yellow and centered with yellow and white garden flowers.

Miss Stuhldreher received her gifts when a messenger boy appeared at the door and gave her a message saying where she would find her gifts. The hostesses presented Miss Stuhldreher with a gift of linen.

A joint shower for Miss Ruth Mengert and Miss Stuhldreher will be given Sunday night at the home of Miss Patty Oberlander, Wellington avenue. Associate hostesses will be Miss Marjorie Scott and Miss Ethel Mae Bogan.

Garden Study Club Meets At Tea Room

Mrs. Charles Birch of Norwalk was hostess Friday afternoon to members of the Garden Study club when they met at the Staiger tea room for their regular meeting.

Mrs. Clarence Lisle, president, conducted the business meeting.

Topic for the day was "Native Trees," and was given by Mrs. Birch. Mrs. L. D. Bauer conducted the question box.

Luncheon was served at individual tables centered with crystal bowls of garden flowers.

The next meeting will be held Aug. 13 with Mrs. Lisle, 238 Blymyer as hostess. At that time, Mrs. O. H. McDaniel will present the topic and has chosen as her subject "Vines, Ornamental and Useful."

Club Members Have July Meet

Members of the Jolly Times club met at the home of Mrs. Charles Daugherty, Newman street, Friday night, and packed a box for Pfc. Charles Daugherty, who is stationed in Alabama.

Twelve members and one guest, Miss Martha Piper were in attendance. The business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Louis Davidson. When luncheon was served, the table was centered with pink and white garden flowers.

The flower fund prize was won by Mrs. Gladys Stone. Prizes in contests were awarded to Mrs. Carl Daugherty and Mrs. Richard Pagani.

Mrs. Blaine Sellers was honored with a personal shower during the evening.

Members decided to have a picnic for families August 5 at North lake park.

Shower Fetes Bride Elect of George Gazdak

Miss Marjorie Walker, bride-elect of Pvt. George Gazdak, was feted Friday night at her first pre-nuptial shower at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Albert Bowersock. Mrs. Bowersock was assisted by Mrs. Fred Arnold, and her cousin, Mrs. Milo Cicolani.

The evening was spent socially. Contests were won by Mrs. Elmer Bradford, Mrs. Anna Michalski and Mrs. Leonard Rider.

At a late hour, luncheon was served. Decorations were bowls of garden flowers.

Miss Walker received many lovely gifts, among them personal gifts and luggage from the hostesses.

The next in the series of parties will be given Friday, July 31, at the home of Mrs. Vivian Walter, Rowland avenue. Associate hostess will be Miss Naomi Velzy.

PLANS POSTWAR REUNION

NAPA, Cal. —(U.P.)— Mrs. W. P. Blackburn, 68, is already planning a postwar family reunion of all her descendants who participated in the war. If all respond to her invitation which she is now sending out, there will be present two sons, five grandsons and a son-in-law. Just now they are all about anywhere from Guadalcanal to Iceland.

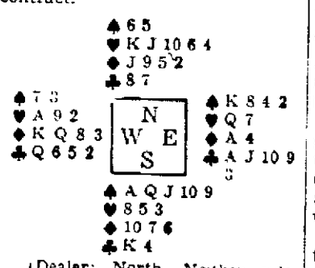
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

IS HIS HAND STRONG?

You can tell, to a certain extent, whether your partner has a fair hand or a worthless one, even if he has not bid at all, from what your opponents do. When they bid to exactly game in No Trumps, you can consider it highly probable that your side has enough high cards to provide a good sound opening bid if they were bunched in one hand, probably a little more than that. By subtracting the strength you hold from that amount, you are probably not far from knowing just about what your partner has. Doing that can sometimes guide you to the sound defense against the contract.



(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♣	Pass	1 ♦
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 NT

North led his heart J against that contract in a rubber game. The Q won, the diamond A and K were taken, the club Q finessed to the K. West won the heart return with the A, and he then scored the diamond Q and four clubs, giving him nine tricks.

"My partner is certainly much stronger than I am," North could have said to himself. "If I were short in hearts, I could be pretty sure that was his suit, so I would then lead it. But I have too many, and probably the only honors in it possessed by our side. Where, then, is his strength, and what is his suit? Spades, almost certainly. Also, he probably has some kind of stopper in clubs, if that is really East's long suit. Besides, an important side entry for the clubs may be in spades, and if so it should be knocked out early."

That reasoning could have caused a spade lead. South would have been able to get his suit set up before the club finesse was tried, whereupon he could have taken the setting tricks in spades.

Let Baby 'Help' You At Home

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

A FEW EXTREMISTS have advised young couples not to have a baby till they can have a separate play room for him. Many mothers who have these rooms expect him from the time he begins to toddle until he is four or five to spend most of his time in his room.

These mothers expect the impossible. A tot wants to be where the mother is, to see what she is doing, to imitate her if he can, ask her endless questions and talk with her.

Of course this tot's company as the mother goes about her housework may hamper her and his eternal talk and questioning may almost wear her out. But if she wants to be a really good mother she will learn not to be annoyed by the little tyke. Rather she will enjoy his companionship.

As the tot goes about the house with her he will face dangers, especially in the kitchen. Also he may want to get into all sorts of things he should not, unless she has him well educated in the meaning of NO. It is quite apparent that if the mother is to have this little child with her as she does her work he will need to be taught this precious monosyllable (which she should have to use but rarely). Otherwise she will be driven almost to distraction with him and he won't be happy. Neither you nor the youngster can be happy unless he has learned the first step in obedience. The lack of early controls often explains why so many mothers don't want their litt' children to follow them about the house.

In the kitchen, the youngster should know he must not be near the stove, nor reach for things above him on the kitchen sink or table. He will have learned this if every time he did so he received instant, adequate physical pain. Anyway, a spanking is less harmful than hot things he might pull down on himself which might maim him for a lifetime.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I gave a second's careful consideration to Halloran's request, and then decided to grant it. After all, I told myself, this was not the Lansfield, where we had to guard every telephone conversation because of the "listening posts" of the manager, Milner, and I did not see any possible advantage to be gained by refusing him.

"Yes, I'll call him," I said, and took up the receiver.

"Will you please connect me with 1718?" I asked, and a second later heard Dicky's voice.

"Yes?" he said with a rising inflection. "What's wanted?"

"You are," I replied. "Nothing urgent, but I wish you could come down here as soon as possible and stay about two minutes."

Halloran was palpably nervous as he waited for Dicky's arrival. I surmised that his was as much the artistic temperament, waiting for approval or disapproval of a masterpiece, as was that of any famous painter or sculptor.

"Please stand here," he said, indicating a spot out of range from the door. "Then, when I open the door and let your husband in, he won't see you until I stand aside."

"Very well," I answered, moving to the spot assigned me.

It was but a minute or two later when we heard Dicky's somewhat peremptory knock.

"Come in," Mr. Halloran said, opening the door.

"Where is Mrs. Graham?" Dicky asked. "She said she wished to see me."

Halloran stepped to one side, and waved his hand toward me.

"There she is," he said in the hushed tones of some ultra-patriotic person indicating the Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

Dicky stared for almost a second, then exploded with laughter.

"Madge! As I live!" he chortled when he got his breath. "Honestly, Halloran, you've created a masterpiece! If I hadn't known there was no other woman here, and you hadn't pointed to her into the bargain, I never would have recognized her. All right, cutie! You'll get by, if your walk, or your talk, doesn't give you away. Let's see, you walk across the room, and then pretend I'm a guest of the hotel and ask me something."

I shook my fist at him, then walked across the room with the rather halting, awkward gait which I thought went with the toil-worn maid appearance Halloran had built up. When I had reached a point directly in front of him, I asked deferentially:

"Would you like your room done now, sir?"

Dicky laughed again; then looked at me with suddenly intent eyes.

"You're a mighty good actress, my dear. But your rendition isn't quite good enough—neither your mannerisms nor your gait. Your voice is okay, plus. Nobody would recognize it as yours. But the other two aren't up to par. That housekeeper is going to drill you, though, isn't she?"

"Yes, as soon as I get up to the seventeenth floor."

"Then you'd better not delay getting up there," he said. "And when she thinks your letter-perfect, you'd better flash me an S.O.S. I'll come in and give you a last once-and-twice-over."

He stopped and the intent look in his eyes deepened.

"We can't afford to have any slip-up on this," he said.

I knew what he meant, and remembered what he had told me about the venomous look Ruth Hayes had given me when he had called me out into the room where he had been "flaying her alive," and she had realized that I had been a hidden witness of her humiliation. Dicky was determined that Ruth should have no slightest chance to recognize me.

"I'll remember," I told him "and I'll be very glad to have you check on me."

"Then I'll be running along," he said. "I'll be able to get up there unobserved, because the exit to the staircase is directly opposite Room 1718. Besides, I left one of the guards in my room, holding the door just a trifle ajar, so I can make the dash into it from the staircase in nothing flat. So even if she has checked in by this time—she hadn't when I started down here — she won't have a chance in a million of seeing me."

VIRGINIA BALYEAT FETED BY FIVE GIRLS

McFadden Home, Coleman Road, Scene of Bridge Party and Shower Friday Evening for Bride-Elect.

MISS VIRGINIA BALYEAT, bride-elect, was honored last evening at the final pre-nuptial party before her marriage of next Saturday. Hostesses were Misses Ruth Mengert, Margie Schwein, Marjorie Boals, Virginia Casperson and Jane McFadden at the latter's home on Coleman road.

Bridge was the diversion at four tables with score gifts being awarded to Miss Balyeat, Miss Harriett Johnston and Miss Marcile Schaaf.

Blue and white was the color scheme used for the table appointments when refreshments were served at a late hour. The guests surprised the honoree with a shower of linen gifts and the hostesses gave her a linen dinner cloth.

Earlier in the week Miss Helen Hartman and Miss Ruth Preston entertained at the Hartman home, 121 Marion avenue, in honor of Miss Balyeat and Miss Katherine Steil, also to be married next Saturday.

Linnaeus Club Members Tour Rose Gardens

Linnaeus Garden club members were taken on a tour of the rosebeds at the Stuhldreher greenhouse, Lexington avenue, Friday morning. Mrs. Charles Payne, hostess for the day, gave a talk on "Roses" after which she entertained the group at her home, 187 Cline avenue.

Luncheon was served at 1 o'clock at the Payne home with attractive arrangements of fruit decorating the tables.

During the afternoon Mrs. S. E. Taylor gave a talk on conservation and plans were made for members to judge the Woodland school gardens this week. Mrs. Carl Spangler spoke on "Herbs." The next meeting of the club will be at the home of Mrs. Taylor, Lexington avenue, Aug. 13.

Tomato Sauce.

1 tbsp. chopped onion
2 c. tomato juice
¼ c. flour
3 tbsps. margarine
1 tsp. sugar
½ tsp. salt

Cook onions with tomatoes for 3 minutes. Strain. Melt margarine and blend with flour; add tomato puree gradually and blend well. Cook, stirring constantly until thick. Add sugar and salt. For a more seasoned sauce, ½ bayleaf and a sprig of parsley may be cooked with onion and tomato. Sugar may be omitted if desired. Makes 2 cups.

Mary Arnett Given Shower At Aunt's Home

Mrs. Howard Miller and Mrs. Robert Weil entertained Friday evening in honor of Miss Mary Arnett, bride-elect of Sgt. Robert Hawley at the Miller home, 244 Bartley avenue.

Guests hemmed tea towels for the honoree during the evening. Miss Arnett received her gifts at intervals when a whistling tea kettle gave her the signal to hunt them.

When luncheon was served, guests were seated at a long table attractively decorated with various pastel shades and centered with a tea pot filled with flowers. Favors were miniature tea pots filled with flowers. The china centerpiece was presented to Miss Arnett as the gift of the hostess.

The next in the series of parties for Miss Arnett will be given at the home of Mrs. Colison Holmes, Amoy-Pavonia road, who will be assisted by Mrs. Ethel Hawley.

The couple have set the wedding date, and plan to be married Aug. 7 in the First Lutheran church. The ceremony will be open and is scheduled for 2:30 p. m.

Party Fetes Mrs. Miller

A party at the home of Mrs. Robert Lorentz, Forest avenue, was given Friday night in honor of Mrs. Russell Miller, the former Miss Ruth Harris, whose wedding took place in June.

A bride's book was made during the evening. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Henry Emmer and Mrs. Harold Copeland.

Small poems told the recent bride where she would find her miscellaneous gifts. The hostess presented her with a gift of crystal and linen.

When luncheon was served at small tables, arrangements of roses were used for centerpieces.

Some of the Provident Loan girls tell me, that, judging from her letters, Bucky Holda is getting just a bit homesick playing for South Bend in that new All American Girls softball league.

And I wouldn't be surprised if Bucky isn't a bit homesick for her old position of shortstop, a spot she hasn't patroled once this season.

And perhaps that accounts for the slump in her batting average from 311 in the second week, to 208 at the end of the first half of the schedule.

In 26 games in the first half, Bucky tripped up to the platter 72 times, got 15 hits, scored nine runs, sacrificed twice, got four bases on balls, stole eight bases, drove in six runs, and fanned 10 times.

She was second in fielding among the league's second sackers with a mark of 936, accepting 44 out of 47 chances, and she was third among the third sackers with 882, accepting 15 out of 17 chances.

Bucky played several games in left field, but is not listed in the fielding averages of the league gardeners. Racine won the first half championship with South Bend second.

I notice the official league averages call 'em first, second and third SACKERS, a little trick this page has resorted to in recent years. You can't call a girl a first BASEMAN and feel happy about it.

Mr. P. (for Paul) Whizzer White, Mr. Al Fendrick, and the old Podger were wagging our jaws in animated fashion over nothing at all, and it was rapidly becoming apparent that this chin fest was producing nothing of very great importance.

Mr. White broke it up.

"Isn't it true, Al, that the Glenmont high school basketball teams play in their bare feet?" the Whizzer inquired.

And then, without waiting for a reply, the Whizzer went on to explain:

"This sometimes presents a problem. When the floor gets slippery, the boys cover it with gravel so they can get a toe-hold, if you know what I mean."

Mr. Fendrick looked at Mr. White with deep disgust written all over the countenance, turned, and walked swiftly away.

"He ought to know about that," said the unoffended White, "he used to play at Glenmont with the Danville team."

Pitchers Hold Edge On Hitters

Hurlers Stay In Front In Hot Weather Tilts.

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

IT HAS been one of the diamond's oldest traditions that the pitchers are always in front of the batters in the spring, but that the hitters invariably catch up with the elbowers come summer.

* * *

Yet, here is the campaign well into the second half, and if yesterday's proceedings are any indication, the flingers are far in front. In five of the day's nine games, the twirlers got out the whitewash brush; half a dozen of the losers served up good enough performances to win on practically any other day; five of the tussles decided by one run; two went into extra innings, and 14 of the 18 elbowing jobs were eight-hitters or better.

* * *

The St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Yankees stayed 5½ and 6½ games in front in the pennant parades, respectively, with a couple of 1-0 decisions. The Cards did it to New York's woeful Giants on a combination five-hit job by Harry Gumbert and Howie Krist, although Ken Chase tossed a six-hitter. The Yanks belted the Browies of St. Louis back into sixth place with Bank Borowy going the route for the first time in seven weeks, and firing a five-hitter for the Yanks, but Denny Galehouse did even better, with a three-hit heartbreaker.

Another 1-0 job was chalked up by Mel Harder with a four-hit win for the Cleveland Indians over the Athletics.

With the help of a Major league record-equalling total of 18 putouts by the Dodger outfield, Whitey Wyatt hurled the Brooklyns to a 2-0 decision over the Cincinnati Reds with a four-hit effort.

The old Chicago Cub expert, Claude Passeau, held the Braves to four safeties and came home with a 5-0 decision. With the help of a two-hit, seven-inning relief trick by Long John Gee, the Pittsburgh Pirates nosed out the Phillies 3-2.

The only places the thumpers knocked the roof in were Boston and Washington. Up in the Hub, the Red Sox and Chicago White Sox split a twin bill with homers. The Red Sox, after trailing 7-2, tied up the opener on Bobby Doerr's four-bagger in the eighth and Pete Fox's three-run homer in the ninth and won out 8-7, with a tally in the tenth. In the nightcap the Sox took the verdict 5-1, as Buck Ross tossed a seven-hitter.

In Washington the Nats and Detroit Tigers went down to the wire all tied up, but in the tenth inning, the Tigers hit the jackpot for eight runs and a 12-6 victory.

All Marines Get Sports

Athletics Toughen New 'Devil Dogs.'

SAN DIEGO, Calif. —(AP)— In the toughening-up process through which all marines must go to prepare for front line action, sports activities play a prominent part from the time the raw recruits check in at the Marine corps base's receiving barracks.

Baseball, softball, basketball, football—in fact, all sports are engaged in by marines here to remove extra poundage and harden muscles.

Under the direction of Capt. Charles Church, former coach at the Long Beach (Calif.) Junior college and First Lieutenant Edward P. Rawling, Los Angeles, former swimming champion of the Pacific Coast, varied sports are engaged in daily.

Football and basketball recently gave way to baseball, softball, track, swimming, and tennis, but it's not unusual to see husky recruits engaging in football and basketball games throughout the year here. In fact, the average marine is sports-minded and knows that by participating in various sports he builds muscles that he needs.

The Base boasts a crack baseball team, whose pitchers have held Jo DiMaggio of the Santa Ana army air base club to two singles in the two games played with the Fliers. In Private Ray Yochim, with the New Orleans Pelicans last year, and who was purchased by the St. Louis Cardinals, Captain Church believes he has the pitcher he needs to round out an even better team. Yochim now in recruit camp, held DiMaggio to a scratch infield single in a recent game.

Boxing, highly regarded in the corps as a definite attribute of a good fighting man, is a year-round activity on the base. Serving as instructors are Private First Class Gerald E. "Tuffy" Griffiths, former heavyweight from Chicago, and Private First Class Marty Schwartz, also from Chicago and former trainer of Marine Sergeant Barney Ross. Weekly boxing shows are held and any marine can always get gloves to engage in friendly bouts with fellow marines.

Track activities are handled by Private First Class Ray Sears of Indianapolis, Ind., one-time National A. A. U. cross country champion and track coach at Butler when he enlisted. Sears has developed one of the best track teams among service branches on the West coast.

NEW YORK MIRROR BOXING EDITOR DIES

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— Funeral plans for Murray Lewin, well-known boxing expert of the New York Daily Mirror, were being arranged today.

Lewin, the Mirror's boxing authority since June 1924, died in Jewish Memorial hospital last night after an illness of two months. He had been hospitalized for two weeks.

Harder Hurls Shutout Win

Mack Hits Homer For Only Run of Game.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Manager Lou Boudreau, sporting a five-day beard and a rejuvenated pitching staff, pits his Cleveland Indians tonight in the opener of a four-game offensive against the Washington Nationals.

Flushed by a five-game winning streak, the Redskins hailed the return of Mel Harder to starting duty after he dealt the Philadelphia Athletics a 1 to 0 defeat in yesterday's series final. The veteran moundsman was injured at St. Louis last May 8.

The victory pulled the Tribe into fifth place, a half game behind the Chicago White Sox, and added an extra day's whiskers to Boudreau's face. The Tribe pilot and coaches George Suce, Del Baker and Burt Shotton have agreed not to shave until the Indians lose and the Philadelphia Record's sports staff jestingly sent a box of razors to the four Clevelanders yesterday.

Harder limited the A's to four singles for his third win against two losses and shared his victory with Ray Mack who homered in the sixth inning for the only run of the game. Don Black yielded six hits.

Allie Reynolds, the rookie who has fanned 59 batters in 52⅔ innings this season, will seek his fourth triumph in tonight's game against the Senators' Ewald Pyle.

STOPPED BY WYATT

CINCINNATI—(AP)—Still at the .500 mark in the National league standings, the Cincinnati Reds open a four-game series with the Philadelphia Phillies this afternoon at Crosley field.

Ray Starr will be on the hill for the Reds attempting to bag his tenth victory of the year while Newt Kimball will furnish the opposition.

Brooklyn evened things up yesterday by winning a 2 to 0 pitcher's duel to split the series two-all.

Whitlow Wyatt, whose throwing arm has been so sore since May 30 that he has not been able to raise it high enough to pat sunburn lotion on his bald head, hurled a four-hit shutout—besting Johnny Vander Meer who allowed but five singles.

The Dodgers outfield, composed of Lou Olmo, the new Puerto Rican fly-chaser, Augie Galan and Frenchie Bordagaray, equaled a major league record in chalking up 18 put-outs.

Wyatt knocked in the first Dodger run with a two-bagger in the eighth and Olmo pushed the other tally across with a triple in the ninth.

Worthy Boy Upsets Hambletonian Dope

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The H. K. Devereux $1,000 stake and the $1,000 2:20 mile dash highlight today's Grand Circuit finale at North Randall track.

Speed King, to be driven by Harry Whitney, was favored in the Devereux event and Church Signal with Tommy Berry at the reins was picked for first in the 2:20 trot.

Worthy Boy, owned by Mrs. James J. Johnson of Rochester, Mich., and driven by Sep Palin, upset the advance dope on the $40,000 Hambletonian classic yesterday by taking the $8,412 national stake for three-year-old trotters.

A bust in last year's Hambletonian, Colby Hanover raced to a straight-heat victory in the $2,517 Messenger stake for aged trotters, stepping the opening mile in 2:02½, best trotting time of the Grand Circuit season.

Youth Must Be Served---Later, Maybe

Frank Crosetti . . . in '32

Billy Herman . . . Dodger star

By WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Sports Editor

TWO VETERAN infielders, one considered only a utility man, are drawing the spotlight in the major league batting races and turning all "youth must be served" prophets into horiscopic quacks.

* * *

The two are Billy Herman, star second baseman of the Brooklyn Dodgers since May, 1941 and previous to that a 10-year man with the Chicago Cubs and Frank Joseph Crosetti, the steady shortstop of the Yanks since 1932.

Herman has been swatting the ball all season, currently enjoying a .320 average which has kept him among the first five leading hitters of the National loop for many months.

Crosetti, set down for a month at the start of the season by a suspension holding over from the world series last fall, was shunted into a bench warmer's role at the beginning of the season when the much-publicized George Stirnweiss was brought up from Newark.

Like so many of the rookie "stars," Stirnweiss started off all right, playing spectacularly and also hitting for a respectable average. But like so many of the bushers, Stirnweiss began to fade and pretty soon old reliable Frankie was back at his infield job.

The veteran sparkled right off. He began to hit and at the moment is batting close to the .350 mark. Besides, he is his old self in the field, stopping grounders which probably would have eluded Stirny despite his speed.

Herman always has been a feared man at the plate, owing a .303 major league mark for 12 seasons' work. But Crosetti never was much with the stick, sporting only a .247 mark for 11 years in the big time. Crosetti's best bat mark was .288, made in 1936.

Herman is a native of New Albany, Ind., breaking into baseball as an 18-year-old star for Vicksburg in the Cotton States league. In his first season he pounded the ball for a .322 mark. Moving up to Louisville he continued to sock the ball, and when he hit for .350 in 1931 the Chicago Cubs grabbed him.

After going to the Cubs, Herman continued to display his minor league brilliance and has been an outstanding National leaguer ever since. He was traded to Brooklyn in May, 1941.

Crosetti, a San Francisco product, played pro baseball first in 1928 with the San Francisco Seals. He came to the Yanks in 1932.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK —(AP)— The newspapers said Capt. Charles Paddock had been killed in an airplane crash in Alaska . . . it was tragic, but somehow it seemed appropriate. Charley Paddock never did ordinary things in the ordinary way and if he had to go out, it was more like Paddock to come to an end as sudden and sensational as the famous "jump" finish he used to affect in his racing days.

The news of Paddock's death started you thinking—about the days when the "fastest human" was knocking off spring records nearly every time he ran; when you were a kid in college reading about him, then a beginning sports writer, trying to follow his amazing career and to understand his tiffs with amateur athletic union officials. . . . You never saw Paddock but once; that was in the twilight of his racing career, but that one time was enough to make you realize why he attracted so much attention. . . . Your first impression was that Charley didn't look like a sprinter. He was only five feet eight, chunky with heavy muscles that gave an immediate impression of power; he looked more like a speedy halfback. . . . In a day when most runners still wore drab, loose-fitting pants, Paddock came out in skin-tight scanties with bright-colored trimming—just another of those things that made him stand out from the crowd. . . . Then you saw him run, his big legs generating tremendous power to make up for his lack of form, his body flying through the air in a tremendous leap to break the tape, and you recognized him as a champion.

That leap at the finish always caused argument among track fans. . . . Some claimed it was just for show and that Paddock drove right through in a close race. . . . Once he announced that he had abandoned it, except for photographic purposes, but later he insisted that it won races for him and that was why he used it. . . . A picture taken in 1920 showed him in full flight to beat Morris Kirksey and Paddock once pointed out that his last stride started nearly three yards from the finish while Kirksey's final step was less than a yard away.

Never a fellow to get along on a diet and minced words, Paddock frequently was at odds with the A. A. U. officials.

* * *

Charley wasn't the "fastest human" because his records have stood the test of time. . . . He never even got sole possession of the coveted 100-yard mark because when he ran it in 9.5 seconds, tenth-second timing wasn't officially recognized. . . . Only a few of his marks for odd distances like 110 yards still are in the books. . . . But did you ever hear of another runner who held every record from 100 yards to 300 meters all at the same time?

BABE RUTH PILOTS TEAM IN STADIUM

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Babe Ruth fulfills a lifelong ambition next Wednesday when he returns to baseball as manager of the "Yanklands" in a national war fund game, the New York Yankees announced today.

The former slugger has made no secret of the fact that he has long desired to pilot a team in Yankee stadium. Now he will get the opportunity to direct a club made up of Yankee and Cleveland Indians against a nine from the North Carolina Pre-flight school.

Golf Amateurs Reach Finals

Paper Salesman Meets College Links Star.

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

CHICAGO —(AP)— Tam O'Shanter's glamorous triple-headed golfing circus closes down one ring today wit ha decision in the all-America amateur championship.

The finalists were Bob Cochran, a slender 29-year-old paper salesman from St. Louis, Mo., and Dale Morey of Martinsville, Ind., the Hoosier state champion and a member of Louisiana State university's golfing varsity this spring.

They were all that were left from a cumbersome field of 262 that swung into the qualifying rounds last Monday, and the championship to be decided is the one vacated by Lieut. Marvin (Bud) Ward of Seattle, Wash., who was unable to defend because of military duties.

The all-American open and the all-American women's meets still were going full blast, entering the third 18-hole rounds.

The professionals were locked in a snug battle with Wilford Wehrle of Racine, Wis., and Wee Willie Goggin of the Century club of New York tied for the lead at 140. Wehrle, after being bumped out of the all-American amateur Thursday, came back to soften his defeat with a brilliant 68 in the open yesterday, while Goggin registered his second consecutive 70 to tie the $10,000 event.

Grinning, freckle-faced Patty Berg of Minneapolis seemed to have the women's championship sewed up after her record 72 yesterday which equaled men's par. The chunky redhead has a 36-hole total of 149, with SPAR Betty Hicks of Long Beach, Calif., trailing at 153.

Homers Win For Brewers

League Leaders Edge Hens on Circuit Blows.

(By Associated Press)

Their home run power kept the Milwaukee Brewers' grip firm on first place in the American Association last night, and as Indianapolis dropped a wild contest to Minneapolis the Brewers pulled in front by a game and a half.

* * *

All of the Milwaukee runs came home as a result of circuit blows in their 4 to 3 defeat of Toledo. Ted Norbert made one with nobody on base in the fourth and Tony York blasted another in the seventh with two mates on base to sew up the decision. The Millers outslugged the Indians for a 12 to 9 decision.

* * *

Columbus failed again to gain ground on Indianapolis. The third-place Red Birds nosedived to a 5 to 4 defeat at the hands of last-place Kansas City.

Norman Brown of Louisville turned in a seven-hit pitching job against St. Paul and emerged with a 5 to 2 decision.

Haegg Shoots for New Mile Record

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—(U.P.)—Gunder Haegg, the slim Swedish distance runner, may write another brilliant chapter in the records of the cinder contingent today when he engages four of this country's top competitors in a twilight mile race at Harvard stadium.

Holder of seven world records at distances ranging from 1,500 to 5,000 meters, Haegg hopes to record history's fastest time for the mile in his fifth appearance of a national tour for the benefit of the U. S. army air corps.

A crowd of close to 12,000 is expected to cheer the speedy Swede when he toes the line against the stiffest competition he has met yet—Gil Dodds, national 1,500 meter champion; Don Burnham, national intercollegiate titleholder; Bill Hulse, A.A.U. half-mile king; and Robert Knowles, New England intercollegiate mile ruler.

COACH RESIGNS

EAST LIVERPOOL — (INS) — The resignation of John Montgomery, former Ohio university grid ace, as football coach at Wellsville high school was submitted to school authorities today. Montgomery informed officials he was accepting work in a Columbus war plant.

Brown Pleased by Youngsters' Showing

Uhrichsville Halfback Stars as Reds Defeat Whites 14 to 7.

By GRANT DILLMAN

COLUMBUS—(UP)—Coach Paul Brown today said he was "very well satisfied" with the 14-7 victory of the Buckeye varsity in yesterday's mid-summer freshman football game, but warned that the Ohio State university team still "has a long way to go."

"All in all, I feel very well satisfied with our progress to date," Brown said. "Both squads made errors. But there's going to be errors in football this year because of the relative inexperience of the contestants."

Brown said he was particularly impressed with the spirit of both teams—the spirit which made it possible for the varsity to overcome a 7 point lead established by the Whites in the first quarter and which made the Whites a potential threat until the final gun.

"This is by no means a finished team," Brown said, "but everyone knows that and we've got six weeks to iron out the 'bugs' before the start of fall football practice Sept. 1."

The Buckeye coach also was pleased with the play of Dean Sensanbaugher, Urichsville, O., left halfback who scored the first touchdown for the varsity in the second quarter when he weaved 60 yards through the entire White defense to tie the score.

"But the thing I liked best about him was his throwing," Brown said. "Of course he wasn't in condition today because of that ankle injury suffered in scrimmage last week, but he was throwing some really accurate passes.

The varsity's second touchdown came on a line plunge by Glen Oliver of Columbus university school after the Reds had worked the ball down to the shadow of the White goalposts and Sensanburger had failed to go over the line by mere inches.

The Whites made their single tally mid-way in the first quarter when Matt Brown, Negro fullback from Canton McKinley, knifed 22 yards through the center of the Red defense seconds after his team had been penalized from the Red 7 to the 22 for holding.

The only other scoring threat came in the closing minutes of the final quarter when the Whites worked the ball to the Red 2 on a series of passes only to lose possession on a fumble.

Other players coming in for praise by Brown included Bob Hecker, right halfback from Olmstead Falls whose passing and running sparked the White offense; Ray Stackhouse, varsity tackle from Dayton, and Jasper Harris, Canton reserve halfback.

Brown said Hecker's play indicated that he would give Ernie Parks, Canton McKinley back, a stiff battle for the right half position on next fall's varsity. Hecker is an army aviation cadet but does not anticipate induction for six months.

Gene Clark of Columbus North who was on the receiving end of most of Hecker's passes also was praised by Brown.

"I don't know whether you could see it or not," Brown concluded, "but those boys were really out there dying for the team. In that respect, if in nothing else, it's a great team."

Army Ban on Football Hit

Point to Sad Day When Game's Abandoned.

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— In a move designed to save sports for many of the nation's colleges, the central office for intercollegiate athletes today went on record in opposition to the war department ban preventing trainees at "little West Points" from participating in intercollegiate sports.

The central office, which controls the athletic destinies of 75 schools, issued a letter which contended that "the proven value of competitive sports justifies the lifting of the ban."

Written by Executive Director Asa Bushnell, the letter does not demand athletics-as-usual but contends that "there should be a carefully planned regime designed to make every American fighting man a potential victor."

"To us who hope for removal of the current prohibition, there is inexplicable inconsistency in its presence," Bushnell said. "The army permits and encourages the organization of teams from personnel at its many bases in this country and abroad. Further, it does not limit to an intramural conception the manner in which schedules are arranged and carried out, but approves of contests with outside opponents."

Bushnell pointed out that Maj. Gen. Francis B. Wilby, U. S. Military academy superintendent, said recently that "it would be a very sad day for West Point" if body-contact types of athletics—such as football—were abandoned.

"The policy adopted at Annapolis is mirrored at the Navy campus training centers, where men may substitute participation on inter-collegiate teams for required exercise periods," Bushnell added. "Why then is not the policy adopted at West Point likewise mirrored at the army campus training centers? The many 'little Annapolis' are modeled upon Annapolis, but the many 'little West Points' do not resemble West Point."

Bushnell, explaining that 29 of the 75 colleges in his association have been forced to drop football because of the war department ban, said he "viewed the situation both with bewilderment and regret."

"We are earnestly hopeful that some way may be found by Secretary of War Stimson to permit the army's campus-bound soldiers to take part in intercollegiate athletics and in turn to gain the benefits in such body-building and nerve-steeling activity," he added. "We feel that we are not overemphasizing the importance of this possible revision in policy when we hold that the change could have direct bearing on the length of the war."

Armstrong Liked Over Willie Joyce

HOLLYWOOD — (U.P.) — Aging Henry Armstrong, who now desires to become a preacher when his boxing days are over, will go into a small, 16-foot ring this afternoon a 2½ to 1 favorite to defeat Willie Joyce.

* * *

Joyce holds a decision over Armstrong, won in a previous meeting in which Willie stayed in close to jolt his opponent and then back-tracked all over the 20-foot ring at Olympic Stadium to wear out hammering Henry.

Since then Armstrong has invaded the east with a large share of success and should be in tip-top condition for the bout.

Joyce has been on the inactive list for several months because of a broken jaw he suffered in his last bout with Armstrong. He seems just as fast as ever, however.

Navy Gridders to Help Pennsylvania

PHILADELPHIA —(U.P.)— University of Pennsylvania football Coach George Munger, faced with the task of building a team around the only three men left from last year's varsity squad, called the Red and Blue's first spring footall practice today at River field.

Although approximately 100 men, including members of the navy's V-5, V-12 and R. O. T. C. groups, are expected to report, Munger has only Center Don Bitler and Halfbacks Bob Odell and Joe Kane returning from the 1942 team.

Hour-long practice sessions will be held five days a week for the next five weeks.

"Woods and Waters"

By YUNCKER BROS.

The fantastic angler fish lures smaller fish into his mouth with a red tipped antenna sticking out from his head, and worm-like tendrils around his jaws. They are fish hogs too, having been found choked to death by mouthfuls of food, and with as many as seven ducks in their stomachs.

Our war efforts are responsible for something new in the way of fish stories. D. C. Smith, an engineer in the Radford Ordnance Works, in Virginia, was frying a catfish he had caught in the New River, which flows past the place. The fish exploded, wrecking the skillet, and Mr. Smith's appetite for catfish. The fish had been impregnated with TNT.

* * *

Before netting a fish it should be thoroughly played out both from reasons of sportsmanship and safety. Beginners at fishing often lose the best fish of the season, because they get rattled and attempt to make sure of their fish too soon.

* * *

The gannet, a bird of the gull family, has a pneumatic water jacket of air cells to take the shock when he hits the water, after his exceedingly high dive for fish.

* * *

Since we have to enjoy our sports closer to home until victory is won, roller skating offers a healthful and enjoyable suggestion. Yuncker's can still supply you with genuine Chicago rink skates, that will add to your skill and pleasure.

* * *

Did you know that carp are believed to have originated in Asia, and to have traveled west with civilization? And that the evil-smelling fluid which has given the skunk such a bad reputation, is a volatile sulphur compound, capable of being detected, under favorable conditions, at a distance of a mile?

* * *

The busy bee will average about 50,000 miles of flying to collect just one pound of honey, and this where flowers are abundant. In regions where flowers are not so plentiful, they may fly as many as 300,000 miles for the same amount.

SMALL GAINS CONTINUE ON STOCK MARKET

War Industry Profits Held Down by Taxes, Larger Cost, New Contracts.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Small fractional advances prevailed in today's early stock market proceedings with rails again in the lead.

On the upside at a quiet opening were Chesapeake & Ohio, Electric Power & Light, Continental Baking, U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet and Phelps Dodge.

Notice was taken of the New York Stock Exchange compilation indicating that mounting taxes, enlarged costs and, in a number of cases, renegotiation of contracts, restricted returns to shareholders in the first half of the current year. Dividends for the six months were only .3 of one per cent above the like 1942 period.

CHICAGO—(AP)—Grains opened mixed in a quiet trade today, moderate mill buying supporting wheat while rye ran into some selling from houses with eastern connections.

Wheat started ¼ lower to ¼ higher, September $1.45½-¾, and rye was ¾ lower to ⅛ higher, September $1.05⅞-$1.06.

U. S. TREASURY REPORT

WASHINGTON —(INS)— The Treasury balance July 22 was $9,488,794,990.61.

THEATERS

The Constant Nymph.

Charles Boyer and Joan Fontaine are starred together for the first time in "The Constant Nymph," new Warner Brothers' picture which opens today at the Ohio. The picture tells the story of Lewis Dodd, a young composer who is loved by Teresa Sanger, an adolescent girl he has always considered a child. Based upon the novel of the same name by Margaret Kennedy. The supporting cast includes Alexis Smith, Brenda Marshall, Charles Coburn, Peter Lorre, Dame May Whitty and Jean Muir.

"Goofy" Comedy.

The experiences of six young stage aspirants who scheme by hook and crook to have their talent recognized by stage producer Arthur Kennedy, make up the story of "Young and Willing," which is now at the Madison. Involved in these proceedings are three young girls played by Susan Hayward, Martha O'Driscoll and Barbara Britton and three boys, William Holden, Eddie Bracken and Jim Brown, who share a Greenwich Village apartment, live on hamburgers and coffee in the hope of making good on Broadway. "Five Graves to Cairo" is the other film.

Edge of Darkness.

"Edge of Darkness," based on William Woods' novel of the same name, will be the new screen offering at the Ritz starting Sunday. Errol Flynn and Ann Sheridan are starred while Walter Huston, who played the part of Joseph Davies in "Mission to Moscow," heads the supporting cast. "Edge of Darkness is the story of a Norwegian fishing village, its simple, peace-loving people and of the Nazi boot that stamps out freedom wherever it goes. Despite acts of brutality upon the villagers, the underground system functions perfectly. "Rhythm of the Island" is the co-feature.

Wallace Calls Foes 'Fascists,' Won't Name Them

DETROIT —(U.P.)—Vice President Henry A. Wallace charged today that "certain American Fascists" had turned against the present administration because President Roosevelt "stopped Washington from being a way station on the way to Wall Street."

Wallace, arriving here for an "important" address at the state fairgrounds stadium tomorrow, declined to identify those he referred to as "Fascists" but added that "their names will come out if you do not already know them."

"These American Fascists use 'old Americanism' as a refuge,' he asserted, 'but their old-fashioned Americanism is not that of our founding fathers but of the period when the big corporations were in power—when the big corporations had converted Washington to a way station on Wall Street.

"I am a great believer in old-fashioned Americanism. I am a believer in what corporations can do. But I am not a believer in what the American Fascists have in mind."

SHIPPING VET DIES

CLEVELAND — (AP) — George A. Marr, 77-year-old Great Lakes shipping veteran and treasurer of the Lake Carriers' association, died last night in Lakewood hospital following a major operation.

KILLS FIVE AS HE RUNS WILD WITH SHOTGUN

Enraged Husband Kills Judge, Four Others, Wounds Two More In Ogden, Utah.

ton's daughter, ran—and was the next killed. Her husband, Bert Stauffer, followed and was wounded.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks, living nearby, heard the shots and came outside. Cox turned the gun on them, killing Mrs. Brooks and blowing Brooks' hand off.

Ascertaining his former wife was not in the cottage, Cox strode across a small courtyard, meeting Nelson, a neighbor. Nelson, police said, asked Cox: "Is this fireworks?"

"Yes—this is fireworks," Cox replied. "How would you like to have a little of it?"

"Sure," said Nelson, thinking Cox was jesting. Cox shot and killed him.

Cox then jumped into his car and drove two miles to the home of Trueman, a veteran Utah jurist. Running to the rear of the judge's home he fired through the kitchen window. Trueman, hearing the shot, climbed out of bed, telephoned police, and returned to his room to dress.

Only half-dressed, Trueman went to the window, saw Cox's gaunt figure on the front lawn and asked him what he was doing there.

Cox replied with another burst from his gun. The charge hit Trueman in the face, killing him.

In the meantime, a neighbor, attracted by the sounds of the firing, notified police, giving a full description of Cox' old model, light sedan.

City police, sheriff's deputies and state highway patrolmen started looking for the killer.

Cox drove through downtown Ogden to the rear of the police station. He strode into the building, his shotgun in his hands.

He poked open the door of the main police office, deserted by all civilian police and occupied only by two military policemen. Cox fired one shot wildly into the air, pellets striking one officer in the ear. Then he pointed his gun at an officer behind the desk.

But the officer, Lt. John A. Smith, an MP., grabbed for Cox' gun. As they grappled, Sgt. Frank Snyder, another military policeman, jumped on Cox and in the ensuing melee, Cox lost his gun.

Taken to a cell, Cox showed no remorse. Under Utah law, he would—if convicted of first degree murder—have his choice of execution by a firing squad or hanging. Cox said he wanted the firing squad, "immediately" if possible.

FIRE RESCUE DRILL DELAYED

Demonstration Set For Tonight Meets Postponment.

An air raid fire rescue demonstration, scheduled for tonight, has been postponed until next Tuesday night, Ray Ward, chief air warden in the downtown area, said today.

Firemen will join with civilian defense workers in staging the rescue of three "victims" from a smoke-filled room, simulating an incendiary bomb attack on the city.

Ward said a room suitable for the public demonstration had not been found today, but everything is expected to be in readiness for the show by Tuesday night.

DEATH PROBED

AKRON —(INS)— Coroner R. E. Amos today investigated the fatal shooting of Madeline Gillen, 30, Akron school teacher.

Sheriff's deputies reported that Miss Gillen left the dinner table last night saying, "life is not worth living." She went to her room shortly before the shooting, where she was found dead.

and reached the Mansfield parents through the International Red Cross and the U. S. War department.

Written in a steady hand, the brief message said:

"I am well and safe in Japan. I have had no news of the family since Nov. 30, 1941. How are you getting along? Remember me to the rest of the family. Wilbur."

Linn said the writing is that of his son who was transferred to Japan from a prison camp on the island of Formosa off the coast of China. The youth was on duty in the Manila bay area in the spring of 1942 when he was taken prisoner, his father said.

Young Linn was reported missing following his capture and his parents had no other word of him for several months when the War department informed them he was a prisoner of the Japs.

LIONS TO GET TAILS TWISTED

OPA Reveals Check-up on Out-of-State Drivers Who 'Got Away.'

(By International News Service)

CLEVELAND—Forty lions who recently drove to the international Lions convention in Cleveland and think they got away with something probably will change their minds within a few days when they discover that OPA investigators checked up on their cars and found grounds for gasoline rationing violation charges.

George Barnetson, OPA district information officer, announced that only one representative to the meeting was served a summons for rationing violations. He was said to be John F. Miller, Holliday Cove, W. Va., whose hearing will be held Tuesday before J. J. Poorman, special hearing commissioner. Miller holds a B card. He will probably take a train for the return trip to Cleveland.

However Barnetson reported, out of state car owners who were elusive will soon hear from their OPA offices or war price and rationing boards to explain how they could take a pleasure trip to Cleveland with the type of cards they held.

State boards notified of suspected parties were Texas, Michigan, Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Owners will be traced through license tags.

ADMITS KILLING

Zither Player Confesses He Shot Strong Man.

LOS ANGELES —(U.P.)— Zither player Tom Kappas, who admitted he shot and killed a professional strong man "because he threatened to twist my arm so I couldn't play the zither," fought extradition to Florida today.

Kappas, arrested here, faces a murder charge in Florida.

LEWIS TO FACE WLB ON AUG. 3

Offers to Appear In Behalf Of Contract With Illinois Owners.

opinion on the soundness of the contract," commented Davis later to reporters. "You can attribute that to Mr. Lewis' desire to settle the whole controversy."

A UMW spokesman contended that Lewis' changed attitude toward the WLB came with the enactment of the Smith-Connally anti-strike law, under which the statutory powers of the board are recognized for the first time. That law also gives the board the power to subpena witnesses.

Although there were no indications that Lewis himself would go before the board, it appeared probable that a personal appearance would be made in accordance with the avowed "readiness" expressed in yesterday's letter to Davis.

Defense of the Illinois agreement will involve proof that the provision calling for $1.25 for portal-to-portal pay would not represent an actual wage increase upsetting the stabilization "hold the line" wage program. The contract also grants the miners $1.50 for an adidtional, eighth hour's work per day, to be paid at time-and-one-half.

Watching to See If Axis Declares Rome 'Open.'

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Washington today waited to see whether the Italian government would declare Rome an open city after President Roosevelt defended bombing of the Italian city by American planes as necessary to save the lives of Allied soldiers.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed hope that Rome would be declared an open city and placed responsibility for the aerial bombardment squarely on the Italian government for failing to declare the city open.

The president emphasized that the bombing of military objectives in the Italian city was necessary to save the lives of British and American soldiers in Sicily and said that the Allies had been trying in the past year to have Rome declared open.

DIES AT AGE 83

Rev. William Surdival Taken By Death at Ashland.

ASHLAND—Rev. William Surdival, 83, retired minister and active in Welsh circles in the United States, died at his home in Ashland Friday following a heart attack.

Rev. Surdival was a former pastor of Lexington Presbyterian church. Before that he was pastor of churches in Pittsburgh, Pa., Van Wert and Gomer, a Welsh settlement near Lima.

He was arch druid of the American Gorsedd, a Welsh organization.

Surviving are his widow; three daughters, Mrs. William Edwards, Columbus, Mrs. F. W. Baxter, Youngstown, and Elizabeth Surdival, Toledo; eight grandchildren.

Short funeral services will be conducted Monday at 9:30 a. m. at the residence. The body will be taken to Gomer where services will be conducted Monday at 3 p. m. with Rev. H. E. Andrews and Rev. Otis Harter officiating. Burial will be in Gomer cemetery.

BACK TO NORMAL

WARREN —(INS)— Bus service for hundreds of war workers and other civilian workers was back to normal today as officials of the Warren Transportation company, and the AFL bus drivers' union negotiated for a contract agreement.

Workers were out Thursday on a one-day strike.

Eight Months Behind Already, Grade Elimination Project Has Same Old Story.

30-N traffic has been detoured over Route 30-S to a point nearly half way to Galion and then routed north over a county road to 30-N again.

Cut Off Traffic Lights at Midnight

Traffic lights in Mansfield will be turned off from midnight to 7 a. m., effective immediately, in a move to save electric current and to eliminate frequent stopping and starting of cars which wastes rubber and gasoline, Mayor W. J. Locke said today.

The lights will be darkened during the seven-hour period at the request of the Office of Defense Transportation which pointed out that unnecessary stops when traffic is light wears out tires and uses a larger amount of gasoline.

City officials have hesitated to order the lights out, the mayor said, because a brief test several months ago resulted in several minor traffic mishaps after the lights were off at major intersections. He urged motorists to drive more carefully and to approach intersections slowly when the lights are not operating.

Asks Immediate Execution by Firing Squad as Officers Overpower Him.

(By United Press)

OGDEN, Utah — Austin Cox, 38, apparently enraged because a judge granted his wife a divorce, borrowed a shotgun last night, critically wounded two persons and shot to death five others, including the judge.

Then, while state and local police barricaded highways and searched the streets of Ogden with their guns drawn, Cox invaded a police station and fired a fusillade of shots before he was captured. Overpowered by policemen, he demanded that he be executed immediately.

The dead were District Judge Lewis V. Trueman; Mrs. Jane Stauffer, 29, a Mrs. Burton of Rigby, Idaho; Mrs. Betty A. Brooks, and Sam Nelson.

Also shot by the crazed gunman and not expected to live were Bert Stauffer, 35, and F. Dale Brooks, husbands of two of the victims.

Cox's wife was granted a divorce recently by Judge Trueman on grounds Cox had beaten her and "tried to tear her tongue out."

Sheriff John R. Watson said Cox apparently became enraged because of the divorce—and a subsequent jail sentence for harming Mrs. Cox—so "set out to kill any officer or judge he found."

As police reconstructed the weird, bloody chain of events, Cox telephoned a friend who told him where his former wife could be found.

Cox drove to the address in his old car, got out and strode to the door of a small cottage. Mrs. Burton answered a knock and Cox, without saying a word, shot her, killing her instantly with a blast from a .12 gauge shotgun.

HUNT SAILOR

Police Told Deranged Man Threatening Wife.

Mansfield police today were asked to be on the alert for a sailor who has been honorably discharged from service because of a mental ailment and is reported to have threatened bodily harm to his wife, understood to be in Mansfield.

The discharged sailor's brother-in-law told police that he had learned the youth recently underwent an operation for a brain disorder and had been discharged by the navy because he failed to respond to treatment.

The brother-in-law in Mansfield said he feared for the life of his sister if her husband returns here since the sailor is reported to be armed and threatened to shoot her.

Police were given a detailed description of the sailor who is more than six feet tall and weighs nearly 200 pounds.

It'll Be Next Week Now for 30-N Opening

Eight Months Behind, Grade Project Has Same Old Story.

Motorists who counted on driving out U. S. Route 30-N over the B. and O. and Erie grade elimination project this week are going to be disappointed again.

Although it was predicted a week ago that the project would be opened to through travel by the end of this week, Vance Grimes, Ashland division state highway engineer, said today that it would be "early next week" before the route is ready for heavy traffic.

Scheduled for completion last Nov. 30, nearly eight months ago, the new section of highway won't be completed by next week even if it is open to traffic then, and only one lane will be used for a time.

Grimes said the two lanes of cement paving were finished Thursday but it requires three days for the cement to "set" so it can be used, and some of the cross-overs between the lanes and steps to homes must still be poured, he said.

By keeping one lane closed, workmen will be able to do the rest of the work, probably within another month, the division engineer said.

Persons who live along the section which is being improved have been driving over parts of the road for more than a week, Grimes said. Heavier travel can't be permitted on the road, however, until the cement has had time to harden properly, he added.

Since the Lombardo Brothers Construction company of Cleveland, contractor on the job neared the Nov. 30 completion date the time has dragged out, with highway representatives asserting a number of times that they "hoped to have the route open" next month or next week.

During the long period the highway has been closed, all Route

LEWIS OFFERS TO GO BEFORE WLB AUG. 3

UMW Chief Ready to Defend New Contract With Illinois Owners.

BOARD ACTS QUICKLY

Sets Hearing as Soon as It Receives Announcement; Davis Approves.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—John L. Lewis today faced the job of convincing the War Labor Board that the newly-signed wage agreement between his United Mine workers and the Illinois coal operators is "in the public interest."

The WLB hearing in the case has been set for Aug. 3 barring changes in plans, it will be the first time Lewis has appeared before the board and will mark the climax in his long fight to ignore it.

Lewis' announcement yesterday of his willingness to go before the board to defend the contract, which includes compensation for "portal-to-portal" pay, set the scene for a wholly new chapter in the longstanding coal dispute.

Announcement that the union would seek the WLB's approval of the agreement was made in a letter addressed to Board Chairman William H. Davis and signed by Lewis and Ray Edmundson, president of UMW District 12 embracing the Illinois soft coal fields. The operators had already filed copies of the contract with the board following signature to the agreement by the two parties on July 21.

"We believe the agreement is in the public interest and stand ready to appear before you in its support in such hearings as you may elect," the Lewis-Edmundson letter said. "We sincerely recommend its approval by the board."

Within an hour after receipt of the letter the board set 10 a. m. Aug. 3 as the time for the hearing. It also sent telegrams to the operators and the union requesting their representatives to appear.

"It is highly proper for Mr. Lewis to appear and express his

Two cases of undulant fever in the same northern Richland county home were reported today by Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, who said the illness of a father and his son had been traced to three of their cows which were infected with Bang's disease.

Dr. Wild said use of the milk from the infected animals had been confined to one home and there was little danger that the disease would spread. The cows have been destroyed, he said.

The fever cases were the third and fourth reported in the county this year. Three of them have been outside Mansfield.

Yanks Take Key Port, Squeezing Axis Eastward

Trapani Doomed as Americans Mop Up In Western Sicily; Torpedo Planes, Destroyers Take Mounting Toll Of Enemy Shipping.

(By United Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa—The U. S. Seventh army has captured Marsala, Sicily's westernmost port, and Allied forces swiftly are squeezing the Axis into the northeastern tip of the island after boosting the grand total of prisoners to 60,000, it was announced today as the campaign entered its third week.

"A rapidly diminishing portion of the island is all that remains to the Axis," Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's communique reported. British warships shelled the German troops holding off the British at Catania.

The seizure of Marsala sealed the doom of Trapani, big west coast port 15 miles to the north and the only remaining enemy base of importance in western Sicily. Trapani has a good harbor and controls a network of airfields.

(Axis broadcasts already have reported the evacuation of both Trapani and Marsala, as well as Palermo, which was captured by the Americans on Thursday.)

All that remained for the Seventh army in western Sicily was a mopping-up operation. Italian troops were surrendering by the thousands and at some places whole divisions laid down their arms.

American troops alone have captured 40,000 prisoners and the clean-up in the west may net them another 50,000.

Marsala, a commercial town of 30,000, fell to the American spearhead that slashed around the southwest corner of Sicily from the airfield town of Castelvetrano and its capture netted the Americans vast quantities of equipment and thousands of prisoners.

A special Allied announcement said that all airfields in Sicily now had been captured or neutralized with enemy air resistance now "ineffective."

Allied torpedo bombers joined in the parade of successes, sinking one enemy merchant ship, heavily damaging two others and leaving a destroyer in flames.

Two Allied destroyers, one of them Greek, damaged three German torpedo boats Tuesday night, two of them severely.

(British planes have wiped out an entire convoy of small barges ferrying supplies to Sicily, radio London said today.)

(British military observers in London said that military operations in western Sicily could be considered at an end and indicated that an all-out assault on Axis positions in eastern Sicily was imminent.)

British warships steamed up the east coast of Sicily and turned their big guns on German troops holding off Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth army on the approaches to Catania, Sicily's second largest port, where the bloodiest fighting of the entire campaign was under way.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's communique spoke of fierce resistance below Catania.

BIG-SCALE: Allies Hurl Air Bow at Crete, Lose 17 Planes

(By United Press)

CAIRO—Allied bombers launched a large-scale aerial offensive against Crete yesterday, it was announced today, losing 17 planes in what a German broadcast asserted was a test of Axis defenses, presumably in advance of major operations in the eastern Mediterranean.

British and Greek light and fighter-bombers blew up an ammunition dump, scored direct hits on factories at Erakleion, the capital and Pherapetra, and strafed wireless and power stations, German troop encampments, gun positions and transport, a Royal Air Force communique reported.

Formation after formation of Hurricanes, Beaufighters, and Baltimores swept more than 200 miles across the Mediterranean from middle-eastern bases to give Crete its hardest pounding since the island was captured by German paratroops in the spring of 1941.

A German Transocean broadcast recorded in London and relayed here said that German air bases and three of the largest cities on Crete were attacked. It implied that at least 70 planes participated in the raids though it was possible the force was even larger.

Less than a month ago British troops landed on the island and destroyed German airdrome installations in a Commando-like raid, after which they withdrew.

Axis broadcasts have been speculating on Allied action in the eastern Mediterranean ever since the fall of Tunisia. The British Ninth and Tenth armies are known to have undergone invasion training in the Middle East and in addition, large French and Polish forces are stationed there.

Crete is a natural invasion stepping stone for Greece and the rest of the Balkans and a landing there would be supported by patriot forces including large numbers of British soldiers left behind when the bulk of their armies were evacuated in 1941.

ATTRITION: Yanks Blast 13 Jap Aircraft, Seaplane Tender

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The navy disclosed today that heavy American air raids preceded and followed the American warships' bombardment on Japanese positions on Kiska island Thursday.

(By International News Service)

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA—American airmen, continuing their war of attrition on Japanese garrisons in the island arc north and east of Australia, today were credited with the destruction of a 9,000-ton enemy seaplane tender and damage of one of its four escorting destroyers.

Sinking of the tender described by an official communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters as of the "Nisshin" class, occurred off the coast of Bougainville in the northern Solomons. The enemy warship was attempting to reinforce the heavily-bombed Japanese base at Buin when Allied heavy torpedo and dive bombers, with a strong fighter escort, sighted and sank the vessel.

Only three Allied fighters were lost when a large force of enemy Zero fighters sought to break up the United Nations formation. The Japs lost five planes in their efforts.

The other end of the 700-mile Southwest Pacific front also saw heavy aerial action when Allied bombers poured 61 tons of high explosives upon the enemy in the Bogadjim area of New Guinea, south of Madang.

Approximately 60 Japanese planes took to the air in a desperate effort to stem this Allied attack. Thirteen of these were seen to plunge to destruction while five other Zeros were hit.

These leaflets carried messages from Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill which were part of the heavy ammunition in political warfare to bring Italy to early surrender. The leaflets warned citizens of Rome that military objectives there were liable to be bombed. They said that the sole hope for Italy's survival lay in honorable capitulation.

The next day the biggest daylight raid in history was put on over Rome. Resistance was pathetic. The raid covered the midday hours when the people would be out on the streets and could see the huge formations overhead. How could any Italian see that force of enemy planes moving majestically over the city without hindrance and not feel that Italy's doom was coming from the skies?

A high Allied air officer tells me, and most of his colleagues agree, that seldom can effective morale bombing be done. Even then it is better to have military objectives so as not to waste effort.

The Rome raid seems to fit that prescription. Psychological warfare has enormous possibilities, as the Nazis have demonstrated. But the first rule of its effectiveness is that it must have drawn its vitality from hard military strength. Psychological warfare is an extension of military warfare, not a substitute for it. Our tendency in America was to push psychological warfare as a substitute.

Under such circumstances our pamphlets become only paper wads. But when dropped in connection with such an enormous bombing parade over Rome as the Italians witnessed this week propaganda material undoubtedly can be helpful. More important than that undoubtedly was the depressing effect on the Italian population of the invasion of their own capital by air in such a conspicuous way. The beauty of that kind of propaganda is that you don't have to drop leaflets to explain it. The Flying Fortresses overhead carry their own messages to even the most stupid victim of Mussolini's guff.

What would be the voting basis in the United States of the world or any other world organization of nations and would the vote of a puppet in some backward land be equal to the vote of the United States of America? And, if some decision for war were to be carried by such a vote, would the American people abide by the rule of a rigged majority and send armies to enforce against a third party a decision in which they had neither part nor heart?

Merely to conjure any of a hundred such possibilities is to answer no.

But what is the alternative then? Woodrow Wilson stated it in his dying appeals for his League of Nations. It is a long period of armed might. It is universal compulsory military service and a burden of expense which would keep the American standard of living even lower than it is today and a national readiness at all times to defend American interests wherever they appear to be in danger. It probably means alliances, too, but alliances in which the United States would have an influence proportionate to her size and wealth and her own estimate of her rightness in any cause, and would drop all pretense to be the great, loving defender of abstract justice everywhere in the world.

That is a gloomy alternative, to be sure, but it is a gloomy situation in which the world finds itself and, at any rate, by this decision, the United States could at least pick her own wars and enemies and not be dealt in on wars or policing expeditions against total strangers who, in the opinion of the American people, were more sinned against than sinning. We are, in a way of speaking, strangers in this world, homebodies with a passion for touring and a naive enthusiasm for quaintness in other peoples, and suckers for hard luck stories. We have a low boiling point and a weakness for convincing ourselves when we go to war that we are not doing this for our own interests, to save our own national life, but to rescue others from the clutches of villains who are always dragging them into dark alleys with indecent intent.

Now, the United States is mature and powerful and a nation to be consulted, not ignored, mollified not threatened. If we must stay armed, anyway, as we must in order to be influential in any world union of nations, the cost and risk would be no greater if we remained independent than if we joined the vigilantes of the world as a volunteer, pledged to answer all alarms.

A dog story told around involved an Alpine climber who got caught in a snow drift and lay helpless and alone in the chill Swiss night praying for rescue. After a while, a big St. Bernard dog trotted up, the familiar keg hanging under his neck. The wounded climber reached up and took a swig out of the keg, then indignantly spat the stuff out.

"It's milk!" he cried. "What's the idea of bringing me a keg of milk?"

"It so happens," the St. Bernard replied coldly, "that I'm a teetotaler."

Then there was the yarn about the vaudeville agent who was raving to a theater manager about his new act.

"This is sensational," he enthused. "I've got a small dog that sits on the lap of a big dog and talks!"

"Ridiculous," the manager snapped. "There's no such thing as a little dog that talks."

"Of course not," the agent agreed. "But the big dog is a ventriloquist!"

One of my favorite pigeon stories concerns the man riding the subway one afternoon. He noticed across the aisle a quiet, conservatively dressed man with nothing remarkable about him except that there were two pigeons perched on his head.

"Pardon me," he said to the fellow, "but why are those pigeons standing on your head?"

"I dunno," the man shrugged. "All I know is they got on at Fourteenth Street!"

FARMERS NEED 750,000 MORE VOLUNTEERS

WFA Praises Help Already Given by High School Boys and Girls.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—The War Food administration disclosed today that 750,000 more volunteer farm workers will be needed between now and Oct. 30 to help harvest America's bumper food crop and avoid even more drastic shortages next year.

Officials in WFA's office of labor, charged with supplying farm workers in agricultural areas, said there were 11,749,000 persons employed on the nation's farms on July 1 of this year.

But the peak harvest season—July through October—calls for an additional 750,000 farm hands as vegetables, some fruits, and the grain crops ripen and demand picking.

The office of labor estimates that about 12,500,000 rural workers are needed to harvest the 1943 crops during peak season.

According to extension service figures covering 48 states, there were 400,000 volunteer farm workers placed during May and June. Of that number, 138,000 were high school boys and girls between 14 and 18 years old, while 60,000 were women from towns and cities.

This country, the WFA declared, would have even a greater food shortage than now exists if the volunteer farm workers plan were not in operation.

Listing specific examples of how the "city" farmer is pitching in to assure food production, WFA said that Buena Vista county in Iowa needed 1,600 workers to pick the bean crop and detassle hybrid corn. A recruiting drive in the public park, WFA said, and a newspaper campaign rounded up enough workers to handle the crops satisfactorily.

Similar instances are taking place throughout the nation as a spirit of community cooperation is helping solve the critical food problem.

WFA pointed out that use of foreign workers and prisoners of war in agricultural areas helps "level off" critical seasonal peaks, but added that the main source of extra farm help comes from the cities.

FOUND DEAD

Railroad Cook Taken by Heart Attack, Coroner Says.

Rolla R. Garing, 57, Pennsylvania railroad cook, was found dead this morning in a passenger coach on the siding at Vernon Junction, southwest of Shelby.

Blake Kohler, acting coroner, said he believed death due to a heart attack and set the time of the death before midnight. Railroad employes reported Garing went to bed at 9 a. m. locking himself in the coach as was his custom. When he did not appear in the morning they broke into the car at 7 a. m. where they found him dead.

Garing was employed as a cook for railroad workers. His home is in Bloomville, O.

The body was removed to the Dye funeral home in Shelby pending funeral arrangements.

BROWN ATTACKS POCKET VETO

Asserts FDR Thwarts Will of People, Cites Danger In Non-Inspected Seeds.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Terming President Roosevelt's pocket veto of the Peterson bill "an outstanding example of the chief executive's thwarting the rights of a free people," State Agriculture Director John T. Brown today importuned Ohio congressmen to obtain enactment of the legislation which would make commodities shipped by federal agencies subject to state inspection laws.

"This resolution provided protection to the farmers against shipment and sale of seeds, feeds and fertilizer in the various states by federal agencies in defiance of state inspection law's" Brown said in letters to the legislators.

"Instances are numerous of heavy loss of hard earned dollars by farmers buying seed of low vitality and sometimes full of noxious weeds. x x x

"Last fall, Nathan Mayo, commissioner of agriculture of Florida, seized supplies of Triple A (Agricultural Adjustment Administration) commodities shipped into Florida in defiance of state inspection laws.

"An injunction suit was filed by the Triple A, which finally found determination in the U. S. supreme court. An adverse decision resulted in the establishment of the right of the federal government to ship such commodities into any state in defiance of state inspection laws."

The Peterson resolution subsequently was passed and pocket-vetoed, Brown declared.

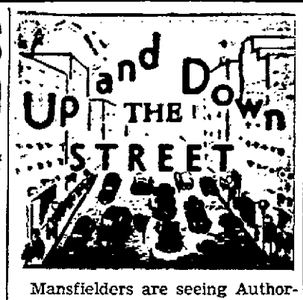
DEATH TAKES E. B. PAULLINS

Ashland County Native Dies at Home Here.

Edward B. Paullins, 69, native of Ashland county, died this morning at the home of Melvin P. Xander in East Mansfield after a brief illness.

Mr. Paullins had resided in Mifflin but had lived at the Xander home for some time. He was born July 5, 1874 and was a life resident of this vicinity. He was the last member of his family.

The body is at the Wappner funeral home where funeral services will be conducted Monday at 1 p. m. Burial will be in Zehner cemetery, east of Mifflin.



Mansfielders are seeing Author-Farmer Louis Bromfield in one of his infrequent motion picture appearances in the current March of Time film now showing at the Ohio theater. The movie, based on the nation's food production problem, shows the Richland countian in an appeal for more equipment and fertilizer to enable farmers to produce more food. He places the blame for much of the hampered production on the administrators in Washington, asserting that mismanagement of the nation's agriculture has been responsible for the decision of hundreds of farmers to quit raising cattle and lower their crop acreage.

M'CARRANS HAS BETTER CHANCE

Wounded Publisher Reported In Slightly Improved Condition Today.

(By United Press)

CLEVELAND — John S. McCarrens, 74-year-old general manager of the Cleveland Plain Dealer whose strong constitution is fighting the effect of a bullet in his abdomen, was reported in "better" condition today at St. Vincent hospital after spending a restful night.

Hospital physicians, however, admitted that McCarrens, who was given three blood transfusions yesterday, was still in critical condition.

The elderly newspaper executive was shot three times Thursday as he sat in his office by Herbert L. Kobrak, 59, former publisher of foreign language newspapers in Cleveland. Kabrak then put the gun to his own temple and killed himself.

The only motive for the attempted murder and suicide appeared to be a police report that Kabrak, a native of Hungary, became unbalanced after a number of financial and newspaper reverses. He had sought the aid of McCarrens in establishing a graphic newspaper in Cleveland.

McCarrens was wounded also in the left wrist and right arm by the three bullets fired by Kobrak.

Police reported that a letter found on Kabrak indicated he had planned some months earlier to kill McCarrens and then take his own life.

McCarrens twice was president of the American Newspaper Publishers association and presently is serving as director.

CONGRESS WILL CURTAIL FCC'S POWERS--BROWN

Ohio Congressman Says Law Governing Communications Will Be Re-written.

CINCINNATI—(INS)—Congressman Clarence J. Brown (R) Ohio, today promised broadcasters that congress would rewrite the communications act, under which the U. S. supreme court, by a 5-2 decision, upheld the authority of the federal communications commission to regulate network contracts with member stations.

Brown told a meeting of the National Association of Broadcasters, seventh district, that the supreme court decision of May 10, was a "strong blow to the freedom of speech, and said it was not the intent of congress to invest the FCC with dictatorial powers.

Himself a newspaper publisher, Brown characterized the decision as also a blow to the freedom of the press.

"I believe as a newspaperman, that radio and the press must have the same freedom," he asserted. "It was never the intent of congress that the government should endeavor to run the radio business."

The seventh NAB district, of which Nathan Lord, general manager of WAVE, Louisville, is chairman, comprises broadcasters of Ohio and Kentucky. Members met in Cincinnati to hear from Neville Miller, Washington NAB president, what effect the supreme court decision will have on the industry.

Following an all-day discussion of the decision, the association adopted a resolution petitioning congress to "sympathetically review the present communications law and revise, propose and enact remedial legislation to the end that radio may continue to serve the American people to its fullest possibilities."

Congressman Brown told the broadcasters that Associate Justice Frank Murphy wrote a "very fine dissenting decision in the radio case and I think he was right."

"I can't agree with the supreme court decision nor with Justice Frankfurter when he said that congress did not limit the powers of the FCC," he continued. "The answer is for congress to rewrite the federal communications act so that the supreme court can understand it and then this decision will be made meaningless.

"I believe I have noticed in the activities of the FCC the desire to reach out for more and more power. That's not good.

POWER OFF

Air Depot Without Service After Car Hits Pole.

SHELBY — Electrical service today had been restored to the Parsel Air Supply depot, north of here, from the Municipal Light company after a car driven by Eugene Broderick, 20, of Shelby broke off a utility pole carrying the main cable to the depot.

The power was cut off for several hours until the line could be repaired. Telephone service to rural residents in the area near the accident was also severed.

The car driven by Broderick collided with the pole and a parked automobile near the home of Ersa Bricker on the Shelby-Plymouth road, one-half mile north of here.
